Roosevelt Asks Extension Selectee Service

Congress Is Told Peril U. S. Great

WASHINGTON, July 21.—(CP)—Declaring that the United States was in "infinitely greater" danger than a year ago, President Roosevelt asked Congress today to authorize extension of the one-year period of active service in the army of selectees, National Guardsmen and reservists.

Unless the extension is granted, Mr. Roosevelt said, the country will be taking a grave national risk and disintegration of the army will be under way within two months.

Responsibility for maintaining the efficiency of that army, the president said in a message to congress, rests solely with the legislators.

Mr. Roosevelt dramatized his request by trying an innovation. He transcribed the message on records so that his words might be heard later by radio listeners.

He emphasized that conditions had changed since a 12-month limitation was placed a year ago on the service of selectees, guardsmen and reservists.

FAR MORE GRAVE

"Today it is imperative that I should officially report to the congress what the congress undoubtedly knows: that the international situation is not less grave but is far more grave than it was a year ago," he said.

"It is so grave, in my opinion, and in the opinion of all who are cognizant with the facts, that the army should be maintained in effective strength and without dim-

Today's War Moves

By British United Press

BRITAIN'S announcement of the new "Churchill" tank and other recent developments indicate that the British are out to overmatch the Germans in offensive power and shift from the purely defensive position.

Military experts contend that wars are not won merely by matching what the enemy has but in producing more powerful weapons and more of them. During the earlier period, the British seemed to be doing just that, concentrating on producing defensive weapons to meet the high-

Tobruk Patrols Inflict Losses

CAIRO, July 21.—(AP)—The British Middle East command said today that British and Indian patrols had carried out from Tobruk a new series of raids with "remarkable" success and few losses. "Several enemy strong points were attacked," said a communique on the sorties, which took place Saturday night. "In one of them serious losses were inflicted upon the enemy before our patrol withdrew."

Veterans of the 49th Battalion, C.E.F. (Edmonton Regiment) Association held their 15th annual church parade and divine service Sunday, when the Association, the 2nd Battalion, Edmonton Regiment, (R.C.A. and representatives of various returned soldiers' organizations marched from the Market Square to the legislative buildings grounds where the service was held. In No. 1 are shown veterans of the 49th Battalion. Maj.-Gen. W. A. Griesbach, C.B., C.M.G., D.S.O., V.D., K.C., original officer commanding the battalion, later commander of the 1st Canadian Infantry Brigade and now Inspector-General of the Canadian Army in Western Canada, is shown leading the parade. 49th Veterans Pay Tribute To Late Comrades

Commemorating their comrades-in-arms who yielded their lives in the Great War of 1914-1918, members of the 49th Battalion, C.E.F., (Edmonton Regiment) Association on Sunday held their 15th annual church parade and divine service, the parade being through city streets and the service at the legislative buildings grounds. The Forty-Niners were joined in the ceremonial by representatives of several returned soldiers' organizations.

Solemn, heartfelt tribute was paid to the gallant members of the regiment who were killed in action or who died of wounds while serving "In Flanders Fields" and who now lie among the varicolored poppies, and to those who have since given their lives as a result of wounds or other disabilities received on active service.

BRILLIANT ACHIEVEMENT

More than 6,000 men from this city and district passed through the ranks of the 49th in the Great War. These gallant men wrote a brilliant chapter in the book of Canadian Corps achievements in France and Flanders.

In honoring their comrades on Sunday, the veterans of the 49th

Battle Nazi Planes in Mediterranean... And Win

Here is the seventh of Robert J. Casey's notable series on his experiences through 22 months of the current World War II, perhaps the longest period of uninterrupted service known to any contemporary North American correspondent. He had linked arms with death through the low countries, through France, England, the Middle East—and in the stygian night of the North Atlantic.—EDITOR.

LITTLE by little you get to understand that the British Mediterranean fleet took a pretty bad pounding at Crete—three cruisers, four destroyers, a quantity of auxiliary craft. You hear that a couple of battleships stood up for hours in a fight with the Heinkels virtually without help from the ships designated to protect them. And meager as are the details of this engagement, they lead to a belief that it may one day class among the great naval battles of history. It was the first definite, unqualified test between big ships and diving airplanes, and for the moment at any rate the evidence seems to indicate that the big ships won. They were damaged, to what extent the reports do not say. But if you talk about the matter with the naval experts they all point out that despite losses the fleet's mission was accomplished, the garrison of Crete was evacuated with a percentage of casualties that seems to have been satisfactory to the Middle East command.

ROB CASEY

That Hitler took Crete, they say, is not conclusive inas-much as the Mediterranean squadron lacked proper support from airplanes. You leave it at that, as you once left the Battle of Jutland and other encounters that never got themselves properly classified. After all, as your memory goes back to the harbor at Ras El Tine and the deadly traps of the broad blue water to the west, it seems that ships don't count for much—they are just ships and you can make a lot more of them if you have to. It's the men who counted with the Mediterranean fleet. They still do—those of them who are alive.

Britain Sears Nazi Nerves With "V" Sign

LONDON, July 21.—(CP)—A British Broadcasting Corporation executive asserted today the V-for-Victory campaign to raise an underground army against Germany was the "first pitched propaganda battle of the war" and Britain apparently is winning it.

The B.B.C. executive, European News Editor N. F. Newsome, said the V drive was one of a series of experiments to test the readiness of peoples of occupied countries to accept leadership experiments "until one day we feel able to give the word to the underground army in Europe to go over the top for us in the final offensive."

A "V" army of millions is mobilizing throughout German-conquered nations in a whistling, tapping, sign-painting campaign aimed now at Nazi nerves.

FEEBLE COUNTER

Newsome said the best indications of how the victory-V was catching on came from the Germans themselves in a "feeble counter attack" by attempting to embrace the V as a symbol for the old German word "Viktoria."

The British authorities, he added, are turning this against the Nazi propagandists by broadcasting word that, since the German government approves of the chalking up of V-signs, nobody need hesitate about joining the campaign.

(The German radio broadcast today a 500-word account of how V-signs had appeared throughout occupied territories attributing this to "the tremendous viktoria cam paign.")

OTTAWA, July 21.—(CP)—Canadians, already paying an extra cent a gallon for gasoline, today feel the effects for the first time of other orders issued last week by Oil Controller G. R. Industrial Targets In Lille Region Attacked; Invasion Bases Struck

LONDON, July 21.—(CP)—The Royal Air Force will launch the heaviest air raids in history against Germany in the next three months, authoritative sources here said today as a stream of British bombers kept up the non-stop air offensive already under way. As the nights lengthen, attacks on a scale "which will make Coventry look like a pinprick" will be aimed at German industry from the Ruhr to Prague, this source declared.

United States-built heavy bombers were expected to be the spearhead of these attacks which, it was said, will surpass in fury the period from June 16 to July 10 in which 7,000,000 pounds of bombs were poured on Cologne, Bremen and the Ruhr.

By SIDNEY J. WILLIAMS

LONDON, July 21.—(BUP)—Swarms of British planes raced over the Dover Strait today to make one of the greatest daylight raids on the French invasion coast, and soon the sky seemed filled with bombing and fighter planes flying in all directions and at all altitudes down to chimney level.

The dramatic daylight raid came only a little more than three hours after a great fleet of British planes had made a five-hour raid on the defenses which thousands of German troops are building urgently along the French coast apparently in the belief that Britain may attempt an invasion.

During the night also the bomber command had made a raid in force on the Rhineland and had bombed docks at Rotterdam.

The air ministry said the bomber command planes made a sustained attack on Cologne and started large fires in industrial areas.

Fighter planes attacked German airdromes in France throughout the night.

HEAVY BOMBERS

In the daylight attack on French occupied territory today heavy bombing planes with strong fighter escorts attacked industrial targets in the Lille area.

Seven German fighter planes were destroyed during the raids and three British fighter planes were missing.

At 8:15 a.m. the British daylight raiders began racing over toward Calais. Soon it was apparent that

Heavy Fighting Seen In Three Nazi Drives Along Russian Front

By HENRY SHAPIRO

MOSCOW, July 21.—(BUP)—Heavy fighting was reported today in the Polotsk-Nevel, Smolensk and Novograd-Volynsk areas and Josef Stalin made more changes in the Soviet defence organization by appointment of four new vice-commissars of defence.

Outside of the main German drives in the Polotsk-Nevel, Smolensk and Novograd-Volynsk regions it appeared that the Russo-German front had become fairly stabilized with only desultory combat in progress.

The latest change in Soviet defence organization followed closely upon the assumption by Stalin of the post of defence commissar in addition to his duties as premier.

The appointment of four new vice-commissars of defence brought the total of these officers to 11.

The new vice-commissars are E. A. Shadenk, army commissar, presumably chief of the political commissars; General V. N. Gedorenk, tank troops specialist; General A. V. Khrulev, and Aviation General P. F. Zhigarev.

WHOLE PURPOSE OF U. S. IS TO WHIP HITLER

Hopkin's Job To Supply Tools Of War To Democracies

That Is Why Lease-Lend Administrator Flew To England Whitaker Says

By JOHN T. WHITAKER

LONDON, July 21.—(CDN)—The first American ever to sit in the British cabinet, lease-lend administrator Harry L. Hopkins today told the Anglo-American press: "Our whole purpose is to whip this fellow Hitler." Oppressed peoples throughout the world who are wondering how the struggle is going to come out ought to realize, he said, that "this war just can't be lost."

Communists Held

VICHY, July 21—(AP)—Seventy-two persons, alleged to be Communists, have been arrested at Troyes in the German-occupied zone, and sent to an internment camp, it was learned here Saturday.

How to get ships, munitions and foodstuffs "to every front where the democracies are fighting Hitler" is Hopkins' job. That is why he flew across the Atlantic to England and that is why Prime Minister Winston Churchill took him into the British cabinet session Thursday night, breaking all British precedent.

EXCLUSIVE

"We Americans are building 6,000,000 tons of merchant shipping in 1942—2,000,000 tons more than double your present construction during the last war," he, completing that much shipping and we are building 1,000,000 tons before the end of 1941.

MAJOR CHANGES

"I have discussed this with the British and the things we are to put in these ships. The things Great Britain needs require major changes in our agricultural production—more dairy products, more pork products. We are going to give Britain all the foodstuffs she cannot get from her dominions and colonies.

"We are discussing that together with a vast program of airplanes, tanks, anti-aircraft and anti-tank guns, and munitions. American production is moving ahead rapidly. Especially heavy-four-motor bombers to reach the easternmost parts of Germany and knock out German industry. I am convinced that Britain and America together can build more planes per month and better ones than Germany. That's our program."

Asked whether America would protect these ships, Hopkins said:

"We are going to protect the ships. You read the president's statement. All I can say is that we are going to do it."

THRESH OUT PROBLEMS

Hopkins hopes to thresh out these problems and all they imply and to return to America more quickly than when he spent a month here in January-February. Yesterday he saw Churchill, attended a cabinet meeting and dined with American Ambassador John G. Winant. Today he breakfasted with W. Averell Harriman, head of the American mission co-ordinating United States assistance to Britain, who has just returned from the middle east where he has been studying supply problems, and lunched with Minister of Supply Lord Beaverbrook and Labor Minister Ernest Bevin.

British journalists asked Hopkins if he realized that he broke history in attending the cabinet.

"I didn't know it, so I did," Hopkins said laughingly. "I just sat down with a lot of people I knew."

Roosevelt Asks Added Service For Selectees

intution of its effective numbers in a complete state of readiness. Small as it is in comparison with other armies, it should not suffer any form of disorganization or disintegration."

The president asserted it would be taking a grave risk unless Congress were to make possible the maintenance of that force, full effective strength of the army during the coming year and give training to as many additional Americans as possible.

He added that it would be a "tragic error" to eliminate about two-thirds of the trained soldiers and three-fourths of officer personnel.

The steps which the President took to underscore the administration's desire for extended service was considered to some extent an acknowledgement of a strong opposition existent in Congress. Compromises have been advanced.

SEE EMERGENCY

But Mr. Roosevelt said he was not asking Congress for such definite language in a specific bill. He said he hoped the legislators "will acknowledge this national emergency either for a specific period or until revocation by the Congress or the President."

The objective, he declared is the all-important issue.

The President said he was confident men in the ranks realized better than the public the "disastrous effect" which would result from permitting the present army to melt away and set back the training and expansion program at least six months.

In addition to recommending continued service, the President said he thought congress also should remove restrictions on the number of selectees inducted each year. The limit now is 900,000.

He also urged congress to provide that employees be asked to continue keeping open jobs for men who have been held in the army.

He promised to direct the return to civil life of those now on duty on active duty would "impose undue hardship" and that guardsmen and selectees would be released as rapidly as possible.

NATIONAL INTEREST

In his message, the President emphasized that the national interest of the United States and the other American republics was "definitely imperilled" by the war sweeping through Europe.

But occasionally individuals, he said, basing their opinions on unsupported evidence or no evidence at all, may with "honest intent" assert that this country need fear no attack on its own territory or on other western hemisphere nations.

Mr. Roosevelt called attention, then, to the sequence of German conquest or moves from Austria to the Russian campaign.

"Every move up and down and across and into Asia, and into Africa," he declared, "has been conducted according to a time schedule utilizing in every case an overwhelming superiority not only in material but in trained men as well.

"Each campaign has been based on a preliminary assurance of safety or non-aggression to the intended victim. Each campaign has lasted no discernible fear and gaining time until the German government was fully ready to throw treaties and pacts to the winds and simultaneously to launch an attack in overwhelming force."

He cited also "a definite responsibility" for the United States to aid every other western hemisphere country against attack from without and asserted that in his judgment it would be an act of "bad faith" toward our neighbors to weaken the army at this particular time.

tinrage (Czechoslovakia), the government general (Poland) and France by storm."

In the various territories, it cited the use of V on all cars, trains, street cars, banners, pamphlets.

PINS DISTRIBUTED

"Pins of the German symbol have been distributed for the Red Cross in occupied Paris, it said. "Thus the German Viktoria campaign is off to an excellent start."

The proper German word for victory is not "viktoria", but "sieg."

"Colonel Britton," the man behind the BBC mike which dinned the victory mobilization broadcast in 17 European languages throughout Sunday, appealed for more V's in sound and sign across the continent and declared:

"We in Britain are with you. Now we wait quietly and patiently until the time comes."

He said he would broadcast again Friday.

The Daily Herald threw some light on the identity of "Colonel Britton" by reporting that he is an actual British army colonel whose name is Britton—"although it may not be spelled quite that way."

Twenty-four hours after he started his Sunday morning mobilization broadcast by thumping the Morse code V, three dots and a dash, on a big drum he declared the Nazis bewildered and the V army swelling "beyond all expectations."

British accounts of response from the continent said the campaign had stimulated the hopes—if not actual resistance—of the German-conquered peoples.

ACTS OF SABOTAGE

Acts of sabotage were reported from Czecho-Slovakia, where V-symbols by the thousand were said to have been scrawled on walls and fences.

by developed striking power of the enemy.

The first sign of a British change of pace was the great aerial offensive begun by the R.A.F. six weeks ago against Germany and German-occupied territory. There can be no question that tremendous damage has been done in these day and night raids and German production and transport greatly hampered.

IMPROVED TYPES

The British blitz was made possible by the withdrawal of German forces for the attack on Russia, but throughout occupied France, Belgium and Netherlands by V-signs daubed on German official cars, on buildings, in front of hotels and in the streets drummed in Morse code, tapped on doors and whistled in the darkness.

The British, themselves, are having a field day with the V's—chalking them by thousands in public places, from the doors of east-end slums to the Trafalgar-square lions. Bakers sold V-shaped rolls. Women turned hat feathers into V's. Searchlights and locomotive whistles flashed and tooted Morse V's.

A report from Johannesburg said the V-campaign had swept the Union of South Africa, where the V-shaped finger salute seemed on the way to supersede the familiar "thumbs up." to the rationing card," the oil controller said.

These are the restrictions which go into effect today:

1—Sale, distribution and delivery of gasoline is prohibited from 7 p.m. to 7 a.m. on week-days and from 7 p.m. Saturday to 7 a.m. Monday.

2—Gasoline and oil sales are put on a cash and carry basis—except for American tourists—with use of credit cards and charge accounts prohibited.

3—Tanks in motor vehicles which do not carry commercial licenses may be filled at retail stations only, barring the supply of gasoline to such vehicles from private gasoline pumps.

TOURIST CREDIT CARDS

American tourists may use credit cards issued by distributors who carry on business in the United States, the gasoline or oil purchased to be used "only in a motor vehicle bearing a number issued by one of the United States of America."

Big commercial trucking, bus and taxi systems generally have their own private gasoline pumps and on such pumps the "hours of sale" restrictions do not hold. Cotterelle said it was anticipated smaller companies should be able to fill up with sufficient gasoline to carry them past the restricted hours.

also it is probable that the British have developed improved types of planes in large quantities and more powerful explosives. Their ability to sustain the raids without slackening—they seemed to have reached a crescendo today—has been one of the important developments of the war.

The protection given by efficient British fighters to the heavy bombers has been a potent factor in the success of the raids, especially in daylight. Britain seems at least temporarily to have superiority in the air in the west.

The British are reported to have developed an improved "stratosphere" fighter capable of operating effectively at 40,000-feet, or 7½ miles. That is about a mile higher than most existing types, and higher than anything the Germans are known to have. The German Messerschmitt 109F single-seat fighter is believed to be capable of between 25,000 and 28,000 feet.

The British would thus have a distinct advantage, because attacks on enemy fighters and bombers are most often made from above. The new type of fighter was discussed in a BBC broadcast by Oliver Stewart, British aviation expert. He explained its use as follows:

THREE LAYERS

"Fighting formations in the air are about the only things which are built from the top downwards. The highest layer of aircraft has a big influence on what the formation is capable of when it meets the enemy. Imagine a formation of three layers, and if you imagine the top layer getting embroiled with the enemy, then the next lower layer becomes more vulnerable, and so on, right down to the bombers in the lowest layer of all.

"If the top layer is so high that the enemy fighters are unable to reach it, it can sit there watching the layer below and guarding it from attack."

Another British development is what is called the "super bomb" carrying a ton of high explosive. According to British sources, one such bomb can devastate an acre of buildings.

Details of Britain's newest war weapons are not given out, but the announcement of the new tank describes it in general terms as so heavily armored and with such great gun power that London doubts the Germans have anything to withstand it.

Mass production of the tank is said to have started. It would be the first tangible fruits of Lord Beaverbrook's appointment as minister of supply, to speed up production for the army.

When and if the British attempt to cross the channel, the new tanks should play an important part in the invasion.

Germans Seek Restart Blitz Russian Front

since the outbreak of the war. First move was the appointment of three commanding generals to handle operations in the three chief theatres of war—north, central and south. These were the three top Russian military officers: Marshals K. E. Voroshilov, Semyon Timoshenko, and Semyon Budenny. All executive power was placed in a five-man defence committee headed by Stalin and including Foreign Commissar V. M. Molotov, L. P. Beria, Commissar for internal affairs; Voroshilov, and G. M. Malenkov, secretary-general of the central committee of the Communist party.

(Political prisoners have been re-introduced in the Red army. Yesterday, Stalin assumed the defence commissariat and the commissariats of interbal affairs and state security, recently separated, were again combined under Beria's direction.)

The Polsk-Nevel and Rasienk sectors of the Moscow front and the Novograd Volynsk area of the Kiev front were the points and it was indicated that the Germans were throwing men lavishly into the battles in an attempt, as far vain, to break through the Russian line.

It was indicated that heavy fighting in the Pskov area, on the Leningrad front, had subsided during the night.

Russian planes have destroyed 36 German planes in their latest operations, it was asserted, and have lost only six.

TAKING NAZI TOLL

The day's first official communique had reported that well organized guerrilla forces, operating far behind the German lines, were now taking a heavy toll.

Au'horized Russian sources said that as the war entered its fifth week the fighting was increasing in scope and intensity. They asserted that in the last week, despite the prodigality with which the Germans had thrown their forces into the battle, there had been little or no substantial change in the lines.

The day's first war communique said there was intense fighting in the Pskov sector of the Leningrad front, the Polsk-Nevel and Smolensk sectors of the Moscow front, and the Novograd Volynsk sector of the Kiev front.

Despite all German attempts to break the Russian line, informants said, the front remained fairly straight between the Baltic and the Black Sea. Local German advances had been admitted implicitly but it was asserted that substantially, the situation was unchanged.

The communique noted that bad flying weather continued but said that nevertheless Russian planes continued to bomb German tanks and motorized infantry and to attack German planes in the air and on the ground. Twenty-five German planes were shot down yesterday, it was said.

GERMAN DESTROYER SUNK

In the Baltic Sea, the communique said, Russian planes sank a German destroyer. Guerrilla detachments were said to be inflicting heavy losses on the enemy.

Radio commentators told how the entire population of Smolensk, were retreating with the army, leaving only daring guerrilla fighters to await the Germans. It was asserted that the Germans were being ambushed in woods, on roads, in villages, and that bridges were being blown up as troops crossed them.

The army newspaper Red Star reported in a special article yesterday that in a powerful counter-offensive the Russians recaptured a city identified by the initial "S". Russian tanks already are Germans frontally and on both flanks, Red Star said, and forced them to flee in disorder.

(There was no indication at what point along the front the "S" city was situated. Capture of Smolensk, key railway junction 235 miles southwest of Moscow, was claimed by the Germans last week. The Russians have not admitted its fall.)

he had documentary proof that the minister had attempted to meddle in Bolivia's domestic affairs.

Estenssoro, a member of the chamber of deputies and cabinet member until June 20 when he resigned in a disagreement over the exchange rate of the peso and dollar, was described by police as head of "The Nationalist Revolutionary Movement." That organization was dissolved automatically with proclamation of a state of siege.

STATE OF SIEGE

The country still was under a state of siege, but the capital and provinces were reported quiet.

Four newspapers, two of which were mentioned in Washington's Axis blacklist, were suspended by the government, and three newspapermen were among those arrested.

One government source charged Wendler M. Pfeiffer the channel of communications between a Bolivian man now in Germany and young army officers here who favor a totalitarian form of government."

Wendler intends to ask the government to show him the documents charging his alleged part in any Nazi plot, a German legation spokesman said. Meanwhile the minister is awaiting instructions from Berlin regarding his withdrawal. He is expected to quite Bolivia within a week.

The "Nationalist Revolutionary Movement" was described by administration leaders as a small party banded together with the aid of German residents of La Paz. A majority of the Germans, it was declared, worked with the Reich's diplomatic agents and financed activities by taxing the German colony.

Entire Crew Of Vessel Rescued

VANCOUVER, July 21.—(CP)—A Vancouver man, Lt. Cmdr. C. G. Weller, was second in command of the British auxiliary vessel, Lady Somers, whose entire crew of 175 officers and men were rescued when the former Canadian National luxury liner was lost in the war at sea.

LONDON, July 21.—(AP) — The admiralty reported today the entire crew of 175 officers and men of the auxiliary vessel Lady Somers had been saved. Loss of the 8,194-ton vessel was announced July 17. At that time the admiralty said 138 survivors had been picked up by Spanish ships for transfer to a neutral port.

Heat Reduces Prairie Crops

OTTAWA, July 21.—(CP)—Hot weather last week reduced the prairie wheat crop at the rate of 10,000,000 bushels a day, Trade Minister MacKinnon said on his return from the west today after a visit to his home at Edmonton and other prairie points.

While drought and heat reduced the crop, Mr. MacKinnon said any estimate of the ultimate production this year is hard to make because of factors which yet may affect the output.

AUSTIN, Tex., July 21.—(AP)—A plan for owners of Texas' 97,447 oil wells to donate one day's production—more than 1,000,000 barrels—to Great Britain received the endorsement of the United States petroleum co-ordinator, Harold Ickes, today. In a telegram to John F. Camp of San Antonio, originator of the proposal, Ickes termed the proposal "a generous and patriotic contribution to American defence."

EVERY MEAL ENDED IN MISERY

But His Indigestion Was Relieved by Kruschen

The treatment which put this man right must surely be worth trying in every case of indigestion. Read what he says:

"Two years ago I suffered very much from indigestion, loss of appetite and the most severe pain in my back. Food soured in my stomach. I felt most miserable after meals, and had no desire or appetite for them. A friend advised me to try Kruschen Salts. I did so, and I am most happy to testify that after a short time I felt the greatest relief. I continued taking Kruschen till I felt myself quite better and a new man. I feel as light-hearted as I did twenty years ago."—W.B.

The several salts in Kruschen combine aid in promoting regularity and help cleanse your system each day of poisons and impurities. Millions take the "little daily dose." At all druggists.

IT'S THE MEN THAT COUNT WITH MEDITERRANEAN FLEET

They Still Do... Those of Them Who Are Still Alive

Casey Makes Routine Sweep With British Fleet: Under Fire From German Bombers

Hartin of the London Daily Mail was the other one, and aboard we found another outlander in the person of Comdr. Hartman, United States naval observer. The commander, of course, fitted in perfectly with the scenery even if everything from the fire control bridge to the keel bore a label different from that of its counterpart in the American navy. Hartin and I were the only landlubbers aboard and our bright new desert uniforms made us feel no more conspicuous than if we had been wearing ballet costumes.

We didn't know where we were going. Once we had been ordered to bring our suitcases to Ras El Tine we knew that the fleet was going out and that was all . . . We had hopes that we might be on our way to bombard Tripoli or Genoa or that we might be headed for some new lair of the unwary Italian navy. But as we pulled out into the Mediterranean, the loudspeaker system, which for its vocal idiosyncracies had been christened Donald Duck, informed us that we had business in Crete. We were going to help to land some troops there . . . Crete!

I remember that we discussed reasons for the landing of the troops. We figured out that Britain must be planning some help for the Greeks. Somebody said that Crete would make a very nice jumping off place for airplanes and a jolly good idea too, what with German planes coming down in large numbers to bolster up the Eye-ties in what they still held of North Africa.

Magnificent Sweep Of Ships

It fas awesomely beautiful, this matter-of-fact departure of the fleet on a routine errand . . . Magnificent the scythe-like sweep of the big boats as they came into line one after one on leaving the harbor—magnificent despite the panoply of 15-inch guns, entirely dissociated with any of our old ideas of death. All was so still that we seemed hardly to be moving. I, standing out of the wind on the quarter deck, wouldn't have believed that, there was a soul above decks until I looked around at the great masses of armor plate above me. . . . . Every rail was massed with sailors, every gun position filled with them—hundreds of them, each doing his job without fuss or feathers, apparently without command.

It is difficult to express one's reactions to all of this. It was something like watching a symphony orchestra that you couldn't hear—a symphony orchestra of a thousand or more pieces. Less poetically it was a demonstration of efficiency such as we hadn't seen for many a long day—an efficiency that no land army could ever hope to equal. .

The ship was not new, but she had been entirely reconditioned, and recently, as anyone who looked at her armament could easily tell. Among other artillery she carried six batteries of 4.7 anti-aircraft rifles, and she bristled with pompoms like a 35,000-ton porcupine. All her fittings inside and out were fashioned of steel and bare pipe, but she was a comfortable boat. The wardroom was spacious and furnished with quantities of deep leather chairs. The cabins had everything you'd expect to find aboard a luxury liner. All the baths aboard, however, were tub. Somebody said this was because they didn't know anything about shower baths when Nelson was running the navy.

Into the wardroom, that day and the next and the day after, the officers came from time to time as men might drop into a club after a spot of work. They talked of shoes and sealing wax, but not of ships. How had we left things in London? Was the United States likely to come into the war? Was there any talk in Berlin about an improved mail service? Was anybody ever going to knock out Joe Louis? What did Benghazi look like?

They were speeding into trouble at a good fast clip and, out of considerable experience with dive-bombers, they knew how serious the trouble might turn out to be. But you'd never know that from the mess conversations or from the routine amusements of several sunny, dreamy afternoons. They got up a chess tournament and a bridge drive and a shove-hapenny contest. The only features known from a program that might have done for any other Mediterranean cruise were deck tennis and shuffleboard.

BLEATED LOUDLY

The major of marines lent hilarity to the chess competition. He played his patch with an instruction book open in front of him and bleated loudly when his opponent failed to meet his moves as the book indicated they might be met. A young lieutenant played the piano for a bit that first evening out. He had a professional finish which was dissected and examined conversationally by a lot of critics who also had a professional finish. There was considerable argument over a lot of "new" books which had reached the Middle East a year late. There was plenty of observation about the pontifical attitude of London newspapers on local politics. The atmosphere of the place and the people who filled it was bright, intelligent, realistic, gay . . . "Just before the battle, mother." . . .

There aren't many accommodations for visiting firemen on battleships in wartime. (In Nelson's day apparently reporters were content to stay ashore and a jolly good idea it was.) But no matter, I got the navigating officers's cabin. He didn't need it! he said. When at sea he always slept up in the chart room. He came in about 8 a.m. and apologized for using his own washstand.

"DONALD DUCK" FAILS TO GRIPE

One of the things that made this brave new world completely fan to a newcomer from out of the Middle East command was the frankness of everyone. There wasn't anything mysterious about this voyage. You were kept informed about it by Donald Duck. It all was going well, Donald mingled jokes with his announcements. If trouble was near at hand he was serious and direct. But you never wanted for detail. You—as well as everybody else aboard the ship—knew just about as much of what was going on as the captain did.

"Anti-aircraft action stations close up," came this raucous voice on the third day. "Aircraft presumed to be enemy about five miles off starboard quarter . . ." That was the beginning of it.

It was a jittery day, that . . . so far as the passengers were concerned. In the world we had left you never had to worry about airplanes until they got around where you could see them and the alert gave you notice. There, by some modern ju-ju, the lads in the conning tower knew all about planes that they couldn't see—where they were, what direction they were going, how many of them there were. You felt somehow as if the air was crammed with all sorts of evil influences. A lot of the gun crews seemed to feel that, too, for throughout the long afternoon they were seldom away from their posts.

"Maybe the planes are only shadows," Hartin said. He had been out with the fleet before and was acquainted with shadows.

SCOUT PLANES

"They're really scout planes," he said. But I could never tell you what good they are. They try to pick up the fleet and when they do they fly along the horizon to find out where it is going. They have to carry an extra load of gas and because of that they aren't very heavily armed. Once our observers spot them they are as good as gone.

I don't think any of them ever get back to their home ports—the record is just about 100 per cent. After a while you get to feel a little sorry for them . . . "

PLANES PERIL BIG TARGETS

But these planes weren't "shadows" in the first place, there were too many of them. In the second place, their movements as reported by Donald Duck from time to time were too erratic. One might judge that while the fleet was aware of them they were not yet aware of the fleet. Late in the afternoon they went away somewhere. We proceeded with little or no worry about them, for Crete.

You don't have to look at the chart to realize that this was a dangerous business — running big targets around on this part of the blue ocean—hourly we were getting closer to Tripoli where the Germans had established new bases and to the boot of Italy whence various airsoyances had been wont to come in the days of Balbo. We slipped, fortunately, into a fog that hid the cliffs where Icarus had conducted his experiment in aviation. We rode about at reduced speed while the convoy went up and the waiting troops went up to the cove of the Minotaur to await the Germans. We turned about for home sometime after sunset. It was a peaceful night with no interruptions until—

In the morning at about 6 o'clock, Donald Duck broke out with "Wakee! wakee! wakee! ivo! ivo! ivo! Black and slow." (It wasn't until a long time afterward that I identified "ivo! ivo!" with "heave-ho! heave-ho!") Anti-aircraft attack stations may be required presently," said Donald pelitely.

After that we had numerous worries. The Chinese magician in the control room kept sensing the planes that we could not see. At five-minute intervals their progress was reported and after a while it seemed impossible that they should continue to overlook us.

PLANES FIVE MILES ASTERN!

Along about 3 o'clock there was a rush of feet on the iron stairs near my bunk. Somewhere in the ship a bugle was blowing. I got on deck just as the announcer was telling about a squadron of "air-craft presumed hostile about five miles astern." . . . Five miles astern and on a day like this. There was some gunfire off our port bow. When I got up to an observation post under the bridge you could just see traces of a cruiser that had gone over the horizon. Nobody seemed much disturbed about the situation—which, after all, was no more than right . . . This was a battleship and I could remember when people used to feel safe in an Anderson shelter with an eighth-of-an-inch of corrugated iron over them.

The day was sunny with an opal haze about 30,000 feet. The sky was the usual Mediterranean color plus, I suppose, a little mixture of desert dust and sand. The sea was a deep cobalt, strewn from horizon to horizon with waving white feathers. Out on the horizon the destroyers were dipping their beam ends and there wasn't any doubt that a pretty stiff gale was blowing . . . In the midst of the news that a visitation was shortly to drop out of the sky, our ship was apparently as unconcerned and unexciting a place as an Erie coal barge.

Water was breaking over the bows and covering the gun turrets below them with a sort of continuous rainbow. The screaming wind was trying to take your clothes off whenever you turned a corner or whenever—as it did every couple of minutes—the big ship changed her course. But save when the wind came into the quarter there was no roll at all—virtually no sense of motion.

Hold Everything

"I see you've been reading about the army being short of equipment, but I don't think we'll need that bow and arrow!"

But there was no overlooking the weird scene on the deck. Here, in one little snuggery I had found near the meteorologist's coop there were about 24 officers and men all cowering with white hoods that fitted like medieval chainmail and somehow suggested the head dress of 15th century nunneries . . . Asbestos hoods, these, anti-blast protection. A lieutenant explained that drafts carried the flames of bombs hundreds of feet along corridors. It was worse between decks, he said.

ZOOM OUT OF SUN

"They'll come out of the sun when they come," you heard the voice of the commander. Then you heard the roar of the signal sergeant calling for flags by odd names "George . . . Admiral . . . Mary!" (And the like.) "Up!" (The string of colored bunting goes up onto the mast.) "Down!" or "Watch the wind!"

Donald Duck announced, "We hear that one of the enemy aircraft has been sent down by our fighters . . . "

Then there is a sound of airplanes overhead. Across the sun and ahead of the aircraft carrier comes a Fulmer.

"Out of ammunition," says someone at the door of the signal station. The blinkers begin to snap along the deck. There are answers from the flagship, now fearfully close, and it's like a street carnival. The fleet makes a great stately turn about into the wind. One after another, a few seconds apart, some of the Swordfish biplanes leap off the carrier into the sunny sky. Frail bright little things they seem—and slow. The Fulmer which has been circling overhead lets down his wheels and lands. After him come two more Fulmers. Three more Swordfish take off. The fleet turns back to its original course and for a while the deck is silent.

Then they come back again—high in the blue—trailing ribbons of curly vapor in the sunlight. You don't have to be told what is going on. The battle has begun. A bomb drops somewhere astern. A Heinkel comes screaming out of the sky. Another bomb threw up a jet of white water near the aircraft carrier, after which the ack-ack turns loose —all the ack-ack of the fleet, but most of all the batteries of our battleship, an incredible din magnified a hundredfold by the drum-like sounding board of the steel hull. The air seemed to have been shattered into solid, spiny pieces which one's ears tried vainly to sort out. The sea was boiling with the fall of shells and more than once with iridescent oily patches where the German planes had disappeared at the end of a streak of flame.

HUNDRED POM-POMS SCREAM

Below the conning tower was another weird sight, a long string of 4.5's waving in unison from their seats in a high wind, barking every few seconds and tossing out fiery plumes and choking hot mists — above them on a sort of stage a group of hooded gunners with tin hats over their hoods, manning what might have been taken for a black-smith's pipe organ . . . Five pipes here with things like New Year's horns at the end of them, five others, purple with grease, extending from bundles of lesser tubes and about them hundreds of small pipes —about the size of a rifle barrel— in close-packed circles. Put them all together and they were the pom poms. The illusion was heightened by the fact that the players in this symphonic arrangement sat on a platform that, like those in the orchestra pits of modern theatres, can be moved at the touch of a finger. And move it did, every time the ship changed course, every time a new signal was flashed down from the control towers, every time a Heinkel believed itself to be the delicate ears of the pointing apparatus.

About 4 o'clock this attack was over. The fleet headed into the wind and the wandering fighter planes came back out of the sky. The Heinkels had gone somewhere, and so far as anybody in our neighborhood knew, we had suffered no damage. A lot of us called it a day and went down to the wardroom, the chaplain carrying a little black kitten that had crawled up to the signal station and couldn't find its way down again. At 6:45 we went back again while Donald Duck announced the presence of ar nher squadron of unseen Heinkels.

We stood there and watched the planes come over, flying so low that we almost expected them to roll their wheels across the bridge. But, though the organists at the pom poms stood ready in their pits, there was no fire from the fleet. The fighter planes stayed moored to the deck of the aircraft carrier, all save one that had been away somewhere and returned to find himself in a dogfight. Presently he, too, landed. Off the port bow across a sea beautifully mottled by the sunset, five of the cruisers fired a few salvos. Then there was silence while the Nazi squadron came back and forth above us and twilight presently covered us.

"They couldn't see us," one of the lieutenants at the signal station explained. The sea is pretty calming when you look at it from 10,000 feet. Even in daylight when there are whitecaps it's pretty hard to make out the units of a fleet."

In the gloaming the signal bridge disgorged a number of officers.

"Well, it's all over for the evening," said one. "The last bag appears to have been a couple of pre-lies or a couple of Jerries."

The tiny marked lights went out on the deck of the aircraft. The signal sergeant suddenly rasped "Wop!" and some flags went up onto the string to meet the last of the waning daylight. We asked him to repeat. He smiled in kindly restraint. After all, the world was getting filled up with landlubbers.

"Wop," he replied "W-O-P . . . That's the signal meaning 'enemy bomber shot down.'"

So into a night of peace and brooding calm we continued on our way to Alexandria.

(Tomorrow, Tuesday, Bob Casey's eighth article will tell how two Frenchmen went to war.)

Prisoners Are Badly Used By Italian Army

By The Canadian Press

Britons luckless enough to fall into the hands of the Italians during the Battle of Africa received rough treatment, according to S. E. Ammon, a chief cook in the merchant marine, who suffered that fate.

Now in Canada, Ammon was taken prisoner with 200 other seamen in Italian Somaliland before the Fascists capitulated to British troops. For the first three days they existed in a native village on one large biscuit and a quarter of a cup of water daily.

Then they were taken to a prison camp in Mogadscio, where they were given a small tin of bully beef and three large biscuits. Ammon said the captives were driven there in a truck "packed in like sardines," and claimed the drivers released great columns of black smoke to torment them.

WITHOUT WATER

During the 10-hour trip the men went through water and were forced to stand up. At Mogadscio they were ordered into stone huts facing the sea—and any attacks the British might launch.

Ammon said the stoves on which they were supposed to cook were useless and that their food generally was rice and water. There were no razors, cigarettes or soap. The heat was terrific and the camp swarmed with flies.

Ninety-four of the prisoners were ill with dysentery, some so seriously they had to be removed to a military hospital where there were neither doctors nor surgeons. The only aid given them was in the form of injections.

SOLD THEIR FOOD

Ammon said the joint Italian-German officials of the camp sold their food to the natives and he was convinced they would have liked nothing better than to see them die. In January, they were moved across the desert to another camp in Merka where there was even less to eat. Bags of macaroni and rice were alive with maggots.

Their ordeal ended, Ammon said, when South African forces captured Merka.

Miner's Death Is Accidental

Exclusive to Edmonton Bulletin

LUSCAR, July 21—The inquest into the death of the late William Charles "Bill" Bevington, miner, who was fatally injured Thursday at Luscar Collieries, was held Friday evening.

Evidence given by witnesses at the inquest was to the effect that Bevington was putting through a prospect hole at a new section of the mine workings which is located about two miles over the surface from the mine tipple. While working alone it is thought that timber broke, causing a cave-in of rock and debric which buried the deceased. He was found dead about 1:30 p.m. Thursday by Andy Hnatyshyn.

Jurymen were: Jacol Lee, foreman, Thomas Watson, Gerald Teed, James McVey, Edward Astley, all of Luscar, and Cyril Bilbrey of Kaydee, Alta. They gave the following verdict: "We, the jury, find that William Charles Bevington came to an accidental death by asphyxiation in a prospect of the Luscar mine on July 17, 1941. We the jury also recommend that no miner in future shall work alone at working face."

A. E. Goodwin, district mines inspector, conducted the investigation of the fatality for the mines branch. Coroner Thomas Chambers of Cadomin presided.

Residents of the town Saturday turned out to pay their last respects to Mr. Bevington. Funeral service was read by T. Rees, president of Luscar Local No. 228, U.M.W.A. Remains were forwarded to Edmonton for interment and pallbearers were W. Hughes, R. Davies, R. Baker, K. Kulyk, P. Mahoney, D. Donville, all members of the union. Interment took place in Edmonton Monday.

Canadian Airman Killed, Another Injured In Crash

SUMMERSIDE, P.E.I. July 21—(AP) — One Royal Canadian Air Force pilot was killed and another was seriously injured Sunday in a mid-air crash near here. Each plane had but one man, a pilot, aboard.

The pilot of one plane crashed while attempting to reach his home airport. He was dead when observers reached the scene.

The other airman was dragged from his plane by two men just before the machine burst into flames.

Names of the men involved were not revealed by officials at No. 9 service training school where the men were stationed. 901A

Hanson Believes Conscription In Dominion Coming

SKAGWAY, Alaska, July 21. — (AP)—Hon. R. B. Hanson, Conservative leader in the Dominion House of Commons at Ottawa, told interviewers here Sunday morning that he believed universal conscription in Canada is coming despite opposition to it.

Hanson said he thought European conditions would intensify sufficiently soon so that conscription would be virtually necessary in the Dominion.

The Conservative house leader arrived here on board the steamer Princess Alice and changed to a plane for a flight to Dawson, Y.T., where he planned to visit George Black, Conservative member of parliament. Others in the Hanson party included Col. A. C. Casselman, member from Prescott, Ont., and J. L. O'Brien, Northumberland, N.B.

Mr. Picobac makes a NEW DISCOVERY

Mr. Picobac was in the act of addressing the cue ball when a sudden thought brought him to a stand.

"Touch of lumbago?" inquired ex-Reeve Pugsley, who had undertaken to beat him at English billiards.

Mr. Picobac took his fresh-filled pipe from his mouth and regarded it with affection.

"I'm transfixed with a new conviction," said he. "I realize afresh . . . this Canadian Burley . . . this Picobac . . . it's good!"

"Just as good as ever it was," agreed Mr. Pugsley.

"It's better," exclaimed Mr. Picobac. "That's what I mean. The longer a man smokes Picobac the better he likes it. Because it keeps improving all the time. Improving step by step with the improvement of Canadian Burley. Picobac is the pick of Canada's Burley crop and a mild . . . cool . . . sweet smoke. Remember that."

"Can I ever forget it?" laughed the ex-Reeve.

Now's the Time

One isolationist leader grew enthusiastic over a rumor that had reached him to the effect that army officials blocked a plan by President Roosevelt to occupy Dakar, Cape Verde and the Azores. The rumor probably originated in the imagination of some other human ostrich, not in fact. But suppose it were fact, why should anybody on this continent enthuse because there is nothing to prevent the Axis forces occupying those strategic bases? Those who do not want to see the menace of Hitlerism cut a rather curious figure with their heads buried in the sands of complacent obstinacy.

It is fortunate for themselves, and for the world, that such men do not govern the United States or compose a large enough element in the population to shape foreign policy. If they did, it would be only a question of time until New York was made a Rotterdam and Chicago a Coventry. That may happen yet, unless the fortification now going on at Dakar is stopped. And who is to stop it, if the United States does not?

Dakar could be occupied now with relative ease. A year from now, unless the Axis is crippled in the meantime, it will be a fortress which can only be taken at heavy loss of life. There has been no evidence that President Roosevelt planned or plans to occupy that springboard for an attack on this hemisphere. If there is any such purpose, the sooner it is carried out the less it will cost.

Told in Figures

Having finished counting, London reports that the Italian army in East Africa was 325,000 strong. There were 125,000 Italians, the rest natives. Of the Italians 100,000 surrendered, 6,000 are still in the bush, 19,000 dead. Of the natives 60,000 surrendered, and the others not killed deserted and went home. The South Africans, Australians and their comrades made a pretty complete job in that corner.

Rome last week admitted total Italian losses in all theatres of "at least" 259,000. Mussolini's book-keepers evidently did not consider native auxiliaries in East Africa or in North Africa as belonging in enough to count, and only included Italians in the casualty list. The natives were good enough to fight, but not good enough to be taken notice of when they were dead or captured.

Equipment captured in the campaign included 860 guns, thousands of machine guns, 150 tanks, thousands of motor vehicles, 1,500,000 shells, and 6,500,000 rounds of rifle ammunition. That is a huge amount of equipment. Whatever led to the destruction of the Duce's forces, it was not a lack of tools to fight with.

Nor was it due to lack of men. Nor to unwillingness of the men to fight, for they fought better there than Fascist troops in Libya or Greece. This narrows the case down to poor leadership. And this was certainly not due to a shortage of generals. They surrendered in droves. There must be enough of them in the prison camps to make up a battalion, maybe enough to make up a brigade. Perhaps the trouble was a superfluity of them.

Helping Russia

Those who jumped to the conclusion that the only way Britain could help Russia was to ship its defence army across to the continent must know better by this time. The army is still in Britain, but Russia is getting as much help as the army could give if it were in the Low Countries and Britain left defenceless.

The incessant bombing of German munition centres, railway centres and power plants is the best kind of help that could be given Russia, for it is help that is steadily weakening the Nazi striking power, and it involves no risk that Russia's western allies might be crippled by a sudden invasion of Britain.

The stereotyped assertions of Berlin radio that the bombing attacks are doing little damage can deceive nobody but the announcers who may imagine their statements are believed. The people of Germany, the sufferers, know better, and the knowledge is spreading as the planes bring new areas into their field of devastating operations.

When a 4,000-pound bomb lands in a railway yard or on an airplane factory, that yard doesn't handle any more freight for a while, or the factory doesn't turn out any more planes. These monsters are falling daily and nightly on vital points in Germany's supply system, in ever increasing numbers, and where they fall they destroy and dislocate. The Russian army has fewer tanks to combat, fewer planes to dread, fewer guns to deal with, because of this ceaseless blasting of the sources of the enemy's mechanized equipment.

And from London comes a quite casual announcement that new type Boeing bombers and Liberators are to be turned loose one of these days. Apparently the flying fortresses have not as yet been employed in any extensive way. Herr Goebbels will have to talk still faster when they get into action.

The Tokyo Puzzle

The result of the Tokyo shuffle is that Premier Konoye got rid of Matsuoka, the gallivanting foreign minister who tied up Japan in two pacts of which it had to break one. Ousting Matsuoka is supposed to have been the Konoye way of freeing Japan from the Russian bargain. It might equally well be claimed to free it from the entanglement with the Axis. Perhaps the Premier means that also, but not likely. Aggressors have to hang together or hang separately.

Japan was coaxed into the Axis alliance to help Hitler. It went in to get what help it could from him. There was no sentiment in the deal. It was a cold business proposition—and still is. Japan won't help Hitler unless there appears to be something in it, just as Hitler wouldn't turn a hand to help Japan unless he got a whack at the spoils. The deep mystery at Tokyo is not a matter of high politics but of low cunning. Would it pay best to turn on Russia and try to pull Siberia out of the fire, or to ignore the Fuehrer's SOS and go ahead with the expansion policy in Indo-China and the East Indies? That is the question.

The Premier says Japan's course has been "fixed". His new foreign minister says it can't be fixed but will have to shift around according to the "day to day" events. Assembling all the contradictory hints, official, semi-official, near official and unofficial, the correspondents at Tokyo say the cabinet evidently intends to keep the pact with Germany, keep the pact with Russia, and pursue its own ends more or less in disregard of both. In which case foreign minister Toyoda would seem to be more nearly right than the Premier—and the world due to witness the unusual spectacle of a country facing three ways at once.

The one safe conjecture is that the cabinet, half made up of three admirals and four generals, will try to grab where the grabbing looks easiest. That it will drop the grab policy and cease from aggression there isn't a remote prospect, nor a solitary guess.

Looking Backward

From The Bulletin Files

1891—50 Years Ago

The survey of the town site at the terminus of the C. and E. on the south side is in progress under the management of Mr. Arthur, Mr. Bemister being absent in Calgary. This survey is the result of an arrangement entered into about the middle of March between Messrs. Nanton, Neilson and Dodds, representing the railway company and the owners of the several properties affected. By this agreement, Jos. McDonald, Thomas A. Anderson, F. H. Sache, John Cameron, A. Macdonald and others agree to give to James Ross an undivided half-interest in each of their properties, he to procure the establishment of the station on or within 40 chains of the land. The station is to be located on Mr. Anderson's claim.

The building up of legitimate business on the south side has been an addition of so much to the general wealth of the district and country, and assures all the more the permanence of the town as the trade centre of the vast regions to the north and west. The only point at which there is any necessary clashing of interests is, if the railway company attempts to use its influence to secure undue advantages in the location of the public offices or the construction of public works of any kind that would better serve the public interests by being located on the north side. Outside this point, the only jealousy that need be shown on the part of the citizens of Edmonton towards the new town site is the jealousy to excel in everything that will render it more attractive as a place of business, a place of residence, or a place of investment.

Extend Service U. S. Troops

Longer Term Quite According to Constitution Is Experts' Belief

By WALTER LIPPMANN

There is not the slightest ground for recrimination over Gen. Marshall's request that Congress should extend the service of the men in the army. In enacting the selective service act Congress expressly laid down the rule, as a matter of fact by amending the original bill, that Congress and not the President, would determine whether the men should be held for more than twelve months. They can be held only when "the Congress has declared that the national interest is imperiled." In conformity with the law Gen. Marshall has now gone back to Congress.

The law, which now requires Gen. Marshall to ask Congress for new authority, is entirely in accord with the spirit and intent of the Constitution and with the traditions of liberty in the English-speaking countries. The ultimate control of the army is the historic power by which the legislature opposes usurpation at home or wars of conquest abroad. This, rather than the conventional academic and legalistic power "to declare war," is the effective power of the representative legislature in the whole process of war and peace.

In reserving the right to say whether the army authorized a year ago is now to be maintained, reduced, or even in its effect largely disbanded as an effective force, Congress was assuming a responsibility which in any free country ought to rest upon the legislature. The American army is commanded by the President. But it can exist only by authority of Congress. What Congress willed a year ago has now happened: the future of the army is in the hands of Congress.

Once the members of Congress have studied Gen. Marshall's testimony, there is little room for doubt that they will not repeat in this crisis the errors of every other Congress in every other crisis in our history. This is the first crisis in which we have seriously prepared for war before war actually began and Congress, considering that there was an election in progress, has surprisingly already shown greater foresight and courage than any other Congress in any similar period of our history.

But if by any chance it now refuses Gen. Marshall's request, or subjects it to emasculating amendment or filibustering debate, Congress will be repeating the errors which in 1776 and in 1861, not to speak of 1812, caused immense unnecessary sacrifice and very nearly led to disaster. The problem of the short enlistment which now troubles Gen. Marshall and hindrances which he now finds in the army, was the main military trouble which beset Washington in the Revolutionary War and Lincoln in the Civil War. Before any conscientious man ventures to oppose Gen. Marshall's request, he should read the history of the army in war as well as set forth, for example, in Gen. Upton's "The Military Policy of the United States" and the recent book by Gen. Palmer on "America in Arms."

One Year Enlistment

Washington's Continental Army was composed of volunteers from the militia of the states. In the beginning Congress insisted that the Continentals should be enlisted for one year instead of for the duration of the war. "Due to this folly," says Gen. Palmer, "it was necessary to train a new army each spring. . . . It was Washington's opinion that but for this stupid decision the war would have ended in decisive American victory before the winter of Valley Forge."

What Washington thought of the twelve-month enlistments is to be found in a letter to the President of Congress dated Aug. 20, 1780. There is not space to reprint it all, though all of it is well worth reading today: "Had we formed a permanent army in the beginning, which, by the continuance of the same men in service, had been capable of discipline, we never should have had to retreat with a handful of men over the Delaware in 1776, trembling for the fate of America, which nothing but the infatuation of the enemy could have saved; we should not have remained all the succeeding winter at their mercy, with sometimes scarcely a sufficient body of men to mount the ordinary guards. . . . We should not have been under the necessity of fighting Brandywine . . . of seeing Philadelphia fall a prey, . . . We should not have been at Valley Forge. . . . There is every reason to believe the war has been protracted on this account. . . . The fluctuations of our army kept alive their (the enemy's) hopes and at every period of the dissolution of a considerable part of it, they flattered themselves with some decisive advantages."

Another Disaster

This same story was repeated, perhaps even more disastrously, in 1861. There were in the army then about 200,000 volunteers for the term of three years and about 75,000 militia, with a three months' term of service, in part supporting the feelings of Gen. Marshall today when one reads the following from a dispatch of Gen. Patterson, commander of the Army of the Shenandoah, on June 28, 1861: "I beg to remind the general-in-chief that the period of service of nearly all the troops will expire in July and August, and new regiments will not be fit for service before September, if then, and meanwhile this whole force will be disbanded."

The disastrous and humiliating battle of Bull Run, which very nearly resulted in the loss of the war, was almost certainly precipitated because the militia were going away. It was certainly lost, because on the day of the battle "some of the volunteers and militia refused to march unless the service less than a month; the term of service of all the regiments of militia was on the eve of expiring." This "discipline, the only sure bond of cohesion, was entirely lacking." (Upton, p. 246).

With this record of the past before it, with the position today set forth by Gen. Marshall, there should be no reason to fear that this Congress will refuse to do its duty in accordance with the responsibility it has expressly accepted. Unlike any other Congress, and to its everlasting credit, this Congress raised an army to prepare for war before the outbreak of war. There is no reason to suppose that in the situation which now exists the Congress will listen to those who ask it to refuse to maintain the army which is raised.

Deadly Weapon

By HENRY McLEMORE

HALIFAX, Nova Scotia.—The British have a tremendous weapon of war in their hands and don't know it.

In many ways it is more frightful than the bomber, the Molotov bread basket, the tank or the Messerschmitt.

It's the bagpipe.

In its fat, plaid belly the bagpipe holds enough horrors to send mighty little of civilian life scurrying to soundproof shelters.

H. McLemore

Halifax is a magnificent city to study the effect of the bagpipe on civilized man. Halifax is the second Nova Scotia, and Nova Scotia means "New Scotland." All of the old country's traditions and customs are as alive here as they are in Glasgow, Troon or Prestwick.

Young Halifaxians (if that is the word) are apprenticed to the young bagpipe just as children are apprenticed to learn forward the harpsichord, the lute, the lyre and the oboe. One of the first steps in child training is to get the lilting of the youngster to overcome a natural fear of the bagpipe. In this city you will see children play ball, roll hoops, fish tadpoles and canary birds, but walk straight to the bagpipe, a much more fearsome object than a hound the Baskervilles even, and pat its plump sides.

By the time they are five and six the children are blowing into a bagpipe so from morning until night a visitor is never away from the sound of this musical hangover from the Spanish Inquisition.

Gets in the Blood

Augmenting the children are their elders. Once a bagpipe player always a bagpipe player. It gets in the blood and there is no known cure.

At the present time Halifax is even more a bagpipe center than usual. There are thousands of Scottish soldiers here and apparently each one is crammed with a bagpipe, just as he is with a rifle and a gas mask. When the children and their parents are not playing them, the sons are.

Because of some unwritten law the best hours for bagpipe-playing have been established as early morning and any hour of the night when the player feels that those within sound of his infernal machine are asleep.

There is nothing like a bagpipe for disturbing sleep.

In comparison a rivetting machine is a carillon, an alarm clock a symphony of a muted guitar, and the clatter of a milkman's horse on cobblestones as soothing as a purring brook flowing over rounded stones. One note from a bagpipe and Rip Van Winkle would have snapped to attention from his sleep of twenty years at the office (with the windows pulled down) at nine sharp.

For those fortunate enough to have never heard a bagpipe, but whose masochistic streak is wide enough to wonder about its sound, I will try to describe same. Roughly, the sound is the same as would be uttered by a banshee if he caught his thumb in a door or in his feet were clomped on. No, that's not right. A banshee is more nearly human than a bagpipe. I suppose if you crossed the cry of a hungry timber wolf, with the squeak of a frightened aardvark and presented the combination against a background of noises formed by the action of a steer cor rounding a sharp corner, a fingernail drawn against a slate blackboard, and Senator Wheeler clearing the end of a speaking tour, you'd have it.

Weapon of War

The British have never employed the bagpipe as a weapon of war. I believe they should. No one who has ever heard massed bagpipe bands in action can imagine a city withstanding for very long a siege of bagpipes. Even the fanatic Kamchatkan could demoralize a fortification before he was stilled.

Broadcasts of bagpipe music would tend to shatter an enemy's morale, and bagpipes, played on the decks of warships, would drown out the sound of motors and make it impossible for a fleet to move within inches of an enemy flotilla before being detected. One word of explanation to my readers: The censor has no interest. The informative article I had prepared for today was given the official nixerooo, the o'l antsy-pantsy.

One must be careful up here not to even mention that Canada enjoys four seasons—spring, summer, fall and winter.

That comes under the head of military secrets.

Don't ask me why, brothers.

"The Devil A Saint Would Be!"

The Saturday Night Review

Broadcast Saturday, July 19, Over Radio Station CFRN at 8:15 o'Clock

By HAROLD L. WEIR

The attention of the world this week has been rivetted on the agreement signed one week one week ago tonight between Great Britain and Soviet Russia and upon what may prove to be the significance of that treaty.

The pact has two main clauses binding the signatories to two definite undertakings:

First, the two governments mutually undertake to render each other assistance and support of all kinds in the present war against Nazi Germany.

Harold L. Weir

Second, they further undertake during the war, they will neither negotiate nor conclude an armistice or treaty of peace except by mutual agreement.

This very brief text may prove to be the seal upon Germany's fate, now that Adolf Hitler's generals have violated Bismarck's fixed rule that Germany must avoid, always and at all costs, war upon two fronts.

On the other hand, it may prove as ephemeral as the similar accord Britain signed with France before that unhappy ally collapsed beneath the thrusts of Hitler's armored columns.

The answer, for the moment, lies with the Russians alone.

Leningrad is immediately threatened. Kiev finds enemy columns beating at its doors. And the road to Moscow lies open, according to German claims, as Hitler's generals, after a brief lull caused by Russian counterattacks and the necessity for consolidating communications, are thrusting forward in their second major offensive.

If the Russians can contain this three-pronged drive, as they have contained the first German invasion, Hitler's "one march blitz" may bog down in the immensity of Russia and the war may become as distressing to the Germans as the China "incident" has become to the Japanese.

In that event, Britain's promise to render assistance and support of all kinds should become effective in the extreme.

Just now, that assistance amounts to little more than an air offensive. The Royal Air Force got forward in ceaseless day-and-night sweeps over the Nazi-occupied countries and western Germany.

This may be less than the Russian military mission asked for, but no informed person attempts to minimize its tremendous effectiveness.

Actually, the R.A.F.'s attacks on the Germans are much more formidable than perusal of the communiques can possibly indicate. Neutral newsmen, writing from Dover, continually emphasize the steady rhythm of hundreds of bombers flying over to pour havoc on the enemy, and the thunderous detonation of bombs which shake the ground even across the English Channel.

Britain, moreover, is more than generous, so far as Russia is concerned, when she sends over, as escorts, hundreds of her crack fighting pilots. These pilots alone stand between her and invasion should Russia collapse.

Britain, consequently, risks decimating and exhausting her first line of defense with this aid to Russia.

Limited though the air offensive must be, its full force will be felt in Germany if Russia holds firm.

In brief, Germany must complete her "one month" blitz within one actual month or she will find herself really at war on two fronts. German military leaders foresaw this and planned to win the Russian war in exactly four weeks. Today is the end of that four weeks. They haven't won the war. Admittedly they have got themselves into a very tight corner.

Effects in Japan

The Russian treaty of alliance with Britain had wider repercussions this week in Japan, where the government of Prince Fumimaro Konoye resigned, as an indirect result of it.

The resignation was accomplished mostly to get rid of Foreign Minister Yosuke Matsuoka, or, rather, to repudiate the Russo-Japanese pact by repudiating the man who had made it.

Japanese diplomats did not relish the idea of taking up arms against Russia in the Pacific while Britain was pledged to aid Russia against all such treachery.

The resignation of the Japanese ministry into a war cabinet packed with three admirals and four generals, came at a moment when Tokyo had prepared for a surprise naval and air attack against French Indo-China. The immediate objective was to have been Camranh Bay because of its strategic value against the Philippines and Malaya.

The date was to have been July 20—tomorrow.

Whether the cabinet change has made an difference in this plan or only postponed it, no one can say.

Japanese Hopes

It is certain, however, that Japan has been confident that the United States would not move until attacked. Consequently, preparations had been made to strike at Indo-China since Vichy is prostrate.

Thus, the Japanese had hoped to

Nazi State Built For War

Hitler Must Create Emergencies to Maintain Tempo of His Organization

By J. S. COWPER

If you're one of those folk who like making gifts to the wealthy—and I'm not in that class—you'll be interested in young Mr. Lindbergh a copy of Douglas Miller's new book, "You Can't Do Business With Hitler."

Mr. Lindbergh was in Berlin long enough to be shown some of the Nazi aircraft and to receive a medal from Goering. That's his title to authority. Mr. Miller was commercial attache for the U.S. embassy at Berlin from 1925 till 1939. He had ample opportunity to study the Nazi way of doing business under the rule of the Austrian housepainterisimo.

Says Mr. Miller of the Nazi aim for running a business in land, fingers burned. His philosophy is expressed in "Mein Kampf" thusly: "The human race has an even great love of peace in war than only decays." Therefore he has geared Germany to a war economy. He must create emergencies incessantly, and continue in a state of aggression, or else go on.

Three times within two decades the Germans have succeeded in living on their debts to the outside world, says Mr. Miller. From 1919 till 1923 they did it by selling paper marks, hot from the printing press, to foreign buyers. Then, still the crash they kept going by selling long-term bonds abroad. When their credit was gone they borrowed goods through Dr. Schacht's "blocked marks" schemes, making trades on their own terms.

With the Reich turned into a great munitions plant in preparation for world conquest, they even sold guns and airplanes to small nations they had marked as victims. With utter callousness, advancing German soldiers were met in Greece and Yugoslavia by German shells and bullets. Raw materials obtained in exchange had been worth more to Hitler than the lives of his cannon-fodder.

A grand young old man died all too soon last week when Dr. Robt. G. Jackson, health lecturer and athlete passed away at the age of 84. To most folk, 83 is ripe old age for healthily endowed persons. Jackson at 80 was nearly blind, his heart was so weak that he could only climb the three steps to his ground floor suite, one at a time. He was given but four months to live by the great Dr. William Osler.

From the cradle he had been a weakling, one of delicate twins born of a mother who was a heart case. He was reared by artificial feeding. He saw parents, brothers and sisters all die in mid or early life from heart disease. For years in mid-life he was confined to bed, a victim of arthritis, neuritis, migraine, flatucmu, stomach trouble and heart failures.

The story of how he built himself up into virile, muscular manhood from the edge of the grave to win a trophy for the best-developed man in America, has been and aid to health for thousands of people. The story is told in his book, "How To Be Always Well," for a copy of which I am indebted to a friend of this column, Mr. A. Corlett of Edmonton.

It was a vitalizing thing to see this alert man with the body of a young athlete, performing at 80 feats of muscularity and agility that were beyond the ability of men in their twenties.

In all historic and authenticated cases of youthful longevity like Old Parr living to 157, Thomas Jenkins active till 146, Ninon de L'Enclos pursued by youthful lovers in her seventies, there's always the feeling that these were people peculiarly endowed by Nature, and to be regarded as freaks. In the case of Dr. Robert G. Jackson, here was a man who started with a bad family record for health, who was a weakling in his youth and decrepit in mid-life, who built himself up mentally and physically, leading a most active life and in his eighties, capable of such stunts as reclining with feet on one chair and neck on another, and supporting a person to sit on the "bridge" thus formed.

Like Dr. Frank McCoy who died in mid-life from the effects of an auto smash, Dr. Jackson, dead at 84, was still as active as dying before his time as a result of the four unfortunate accidents of which he was victim in the decade of rising to his life.

Blind Leading the Normals

And here's another instance of willpower overcoming physical handicaps. A few days ago the blind members of the track team of the New York Institute for the Education of the Blind met and defeated by a score of 48 to 33, the track team from the Long Island high school.

The blind boys got no handicap allowances in any event. John Firoino, captain of the blind team, was the star of the afternoon, winning four of the eight events. He took the standing high jump with a leap of 4 feet 10 inches and the standing broad jump with a leap of 9 feet 7 inches. The only aid the blind boys had in the 50 and 75 yards sprints was a steel wire which they grasped before starting and which guided them to the proper lane. In the high jump they would touch the bar, walk back a few feet, and having visualized the position of the bar, take a running jump over it.

Alberta District News In Brief

FERINTOSH

Farmers Proceed With Hay Crops

Haying is the order of the day in the Ferintosh district, with hay scarce on account of long drought and prevailing hot weather. Wheat that has been plowed under on account of weeds and wild oats getting the best of it is nil of course. The subsequent crop of barley is curled up in the shot-blade, and is finding its way into the hay stacks along with oats, some of it on breaking.

Nursing coarse grain on alfalfa and sweet clover ground will make pasture only. Wheat on hill tops is burning up and beyond help. Wheat on breaking is the crop of the year, and it is estimated by the local Alberta Pacific Co. that a yield of 12 to 15 bushels of wheat per acre is optimistic. Eight to ten bushels is some farmers' estimate; one of which has about the best stand in the district. Lots of chicken feed is in the offing.

CORONATION—Lack of rain and intense heat is taking a heavy toll of yield in local crops. At the end of June crops were suffering to some extent but heavy rains would have picked them up remarkably had they fallen. Now, two weeks later only scattered sections having received showers the situation is anything but encouraging. Yields will be light this fall and at present it would appear that very few farmers will be in a position to market more than their quota.

Olds Briefs

Mrs. R. Macdonald of Regina, is visiting her daughter, Mrs. W. Parker of the Sundre district during the months of July and August.

Elizabeth and Nancy Dean are spending the summer holidays at Saskatchewan River Crossing in the Columbia Icefield on the new Jasper-Banff highway. Miss Norma Hogg, teacher during the past two years at Rockwood school, has left for Olds where she will take a course in Home Economics. Mrs. D. Mennear with her children, Donald, Iris and Dale, left to take up residence at Dollarton, B.C., where her husband has a position.

The recent James River picnic and dance was well attended and all enjoyed a good time as the weather man behaved on this date.

Crops in the district are the best ever with an abundance of rain.

Fire Destroys Miner's House

Fire of unknown origin destroyed the home and contents of Jack MacDonnell, employee of Luscar mines, in the early hours of Friday morning. Mrs. MacDonnell, who was alone with four children during Mr. MacDonnell's absence, escaped the flames by rushing from the building in night attire. Fire Chief C. Wagner and his fire dept. prevented the flames from spreading.

Ratepayers Talk Building Move

At a recent meeting of the ratepayers of the Eagle Point school at Sundre to decide whether or not to accede to the Divisional Board's proposal to move the school building to Sundre, ratepayer's favored the establishment of high school in Sundre but felt that the movement of the building would handicap the education of children in the district, necessitating travel over dirt roads.

It was stated it would destroy the sole community centre, as the school is used for church services, community club, Girl Guide and various community business meetings. School Board Member S. Dean acted as chairman and SuperVisor X. P. Crispo and W. I. Davies, Divisional Board chairman, carried the feeling of the meeting back to the Divisional Board, where the matter will be decided in the near future.

The Olds Divisional School Board, in desiring to move the building to Sundre, wished to relieve the present high school facilities to make teaching of Shop and Home Economics more feasible and to accommodate smaller children of the town at the same time.

WHITECOURT

Fires Menace Hay, Bear Lakers

Fires are reported to have broken out again in the area near Hay Lake, and also in the Bear Lake region, some 60 or more miles from Whitecourt. It is said that these fires were not completely extinguished by the heavy and continuous rains which caused the withdrawal of the firefighters some weeks ago. Boggy conditions of the existing roads and pack trails at that time made it almost impossible to move men and equipment in that area.

It is believed by some of the Whitecourt oldtimers who are thoroughly acquainted with the area that fires in that region could be more efficiently dealt with from the Sturgeon Lake district, where much of the packhorse work could be eliminated as there is reported to be a fairly good wagon road leading into the menaced region from that point.

Ranger Lorne Gray started out in that direction at the week-end with a gang of men to resume the fight which was abandoned when the rains made camp conditions almost impossible.

Seventy in the shade at six o'clock in the morning, 120 in the sun at 4:30 p.m. and 80 above at bedtime are reported as the score of Whitecourt's glass readings during the current heat wave. One of the Govenlock horses dropped dead in the hayfield on Thursday, apparently as a result of the intense heat.

Hay is reported to be curing rapidly. Some farmers report that horses used in the field are as wet with perspiration as if they had been in the river.

The Saturday Night Review

strengthen their strategic position against the Anglo-American and Dutch defenses while waiting for German successes against Russia which would bring about the dismemberment and collapse of the Soviet Union.

Just before the cabinet resignation, Tokyo had prepared an ultimatum for Vichy which would have demanded Indo-China bases regardless of the attitude of Marshal Petain.

Some people believe that this ultimatum has already been delivered although newspaper reporters in Vichy say there is no anxiety over the matter there.

That might very well be. Vichy may be prepared to give these bases up. A conscienceless crew of traitors has been held under the sway of slant-eyed heathen in Japan—if the pay was good enough.

And the slant-eyed heathen do seem to be on the move—somewhere.

WAR PREPARATIONS

For ten days, now, the Japanese government has been nerving its long-suffering public for a new war effort.

Now military classes have been called up. Doctors and other experts have been mobilized. Various zones have been closed off. Foreigners have not been allowed to travel freely in Japan. The usual fascist technique has been employed to persuade the Japanese that the country is on the threshold of momentous events.

Less reckless elements in the Japanese political picture have been counselling caution. They have discovered that their loyal German allies attempted to negotiate recently with certain Dutch groups at Japan's expense. Aware of this typical German duplicity, some Japanese feel that Tokyo's first efforts ought to be to secure for Japan the Far-Eastern regions which Hitler will want for himself if Britain and America, as he fantastically dreams, are conquered.

This canny counsel is hardly likely to prevail with a rabbit-faced neurotic in power backed by seven fanatical admirals and generals.

The cabinet of Prince Fumimaro Konoye took office on July 22, 1940. Its consistent policy has been one of treating Hitler's war as a dangerous but God-sent opportunity for Japan to push forward at British American and Dutch expense.

There is small hope that any members of the new government will pursue a more intelligent policy. It is generally felt that extremists will win the day in Tokyo.

That, decidedly, is President Roosevelt's opinion.

Dealing with the fantastic proposals of certain child-like idealists who believe the United States should innocently kiss and make up with Japan, the President said, just the other day, that there was virtually no hope of peace with Japan.

General Francisco Franco put a silly Spanish oar into the world situation this week when he made his piping voice and warned the United States that entry into the European war would lead to catastrophe.

Franco makes a fine ventriloquist's dummy.

Hitler can make him say what he pleases. But he can't make him do very much.

For more than a year, Spain has been fed through the forbearance and interference of Great Britain. However, one does not expect gratitude from fascists.

This silly, squeaking protest of Franco's was not expected to frighten and did not frighten the United States.

It was calculated to have a demoralizing effect in South American countries many of which cherish a sentimental feeling for Mother Spain.

It was merely intended to add to the worries of the United States against the Anglo-American and Dutch defenses while waiting for German successes against Russia which would bring about the dismemberment and collapse of the Soviet Union.

Looking them Over

by JACK KELLY

DID you ever stop to figure out just what it is that puts a sport over? How do you account for some sport dying out and then coming back with a rush after several years of hibernation?

To some extent the answer lies in the fact that fans seem to tire of certain sports after awhile and want a change, but this falling off in interest can generally be traced to the athletes themselves and the men behind them—the fellows who do the planning, organizing and the slather of work which must be done in the background.

The present boom in track and field athletics in Edmonton is a good example of this—especially in the women's division. A few years ago girls' track and field athletes were as scarce here as 50-dollar bills in my pocket. Then Clarke Stadium was completed and provided an ideal plant. Next came planning and organizing by the officials of the Alberta branch of the Women's Amateur Athletic Federation of Canada. Coaches began to take an interest again, meets were arranged and little trips for the girls and now we have some of the finest talent in Canada developing here.

Over the weekend, four Edmontonians made a sweep in the Scottish games at Calgary. Gertrude Hagen won the 100 and 60-yard dashes, the broad jump, and placed second in the discus throw. June Causgrove took first in the discus, first in the high jump and placed second in the 100 and 60-yard sprints. In the junior men's division, Gordon Mitchell placed first in the half-mile and second in the mile. Douglas Mitchell, competing in the senior section, won both the half and mile runs.

Credit for such a revival in interest in a sport must also be given to the city's schools. The public school system has done much to stir up interest among the youngsters in track and field through the annual fall meets.

When sport dies away in any town or city, you'll generally find that the basic cause is a lack of men and women who are able and willing to do the work necessary. Those folk are mighty valuable citizens—in fact I think we ought to reward them with a reduction in their taxes, by letting them vote twice or something like that.

I could name 50 or 60 men and women in Edmonton without whom all our sport would fold up so fast it would make your head swim. In most smaller towns you would need to take only ten or a dozen key men away to kill that place so far as sport is concerned.

Thisa And Thata Data

THE baseball writers who acted as official scorers during Joe DiMaggio's consecutive hitting streak have a big load off their shoulders now. It frequently was up to them to decide on close plays whether Joe had made a hit or whether a fielder had made an error. Dan Daniel of the New York World-Telegram, who scored the Yankees' home games, tells of a tough one in this week's sporting news:

"DiMaggio has pasted the ball with every ounce of his strength. He stumbles a little, he dashes for first. Tabor (Jim Tabor, Boston Red Sox third baseman) is playing deep. The ball almost knocks him over. Jim has to make a hurried heave . . . the throw goes wild and Joe reaches second. The Yankees have piled out of their dugout and are looking up at me. The fans are looking at me. The entire writing press is looking at me."

P.S.—Daniel held up one finger, meaning it was a hit.

The United States Golf Association gets questions involving everything from the most complicated interpretation of the rules to whether it is good taste to wear a red shirt on a golf course. But they never had one to top this: "A competitor was in the act of swinging her club on the fairway when, like a flash, a ball from a nearby fairway not only missed the player's ball from its position but stopped on the exact spot. In other words, the 'wandering' ball replaced the player's ball after knocking it away. The player, unable to stop her downswing, smacked the wandering ball onto the green. What is your decision?" The U.S.G.A. rules that she could retrieve her own ball and play another shot without penalty.

Things I'd Like to See Department: The Cardinals and Reds tied for the pennant and going into a play-off game with these batteries: Cards—Cooper and Cooper; Reds—Riddle and Riddle. 94 Competitors Seeking Alberta Tennis Titles Here

SPORTS BULLETIN

It's All Over At Last

Saturday the Edmonton Exhibition closed and with the seventh race on that day's program, big time racing finished here until after the war. Today the grounds are swarming with carpenters and construction men as the plant is made over for an Air Force manning pool. In above picture you see Knack with Jockey Solomon up, the combination that won the closing feature race. It was the well-named Valiant Handicap over a mile and five-eighths. The final floral wreath is being presented by Nursing Sister Ann Young.

Sedgewick Club Wins Two Tilts From City Teams

Sedgewick Wyomings, the men's senior softball team which has been setting an impressive record, added two more victories to its string here on Sunday by defeating the Maple Leafs and Medico Welders of the Edmonton Senior League 3-2 and 13-11 respectively.

This extends the Wyomings' record to 74 wins and six losses during the past two years.

The Sedgewick team defeated the Leafs in a five-inning tilt with three runs collected in the first two frames, effective pitching and Leafs errors.

The game against the Medico Welders went the full nine innings, but 11 errors by the Welders offset much of the advantage they gained by out-hitting the Wyomings 19-10. The invaders counted eight runs during their first time at bat and none of them were earned. Wyomings had six errors in this game and three in the first.

John Adamson pitched both games for the Wyomings. Brown and Griffith fired for the Maple Leafs while Zeavin did the chucking for the Medicos.

The third softball game at Kingsway Park on Sunday saw Podersky Furniture hand the Canadians a 10-1 shellacking and take over the leadership of the Junior Men's League.

Aussie Airman Extended To Defeat Stott in Opener

WITH a fine entry of 94 competitors, 23 of whom are from points outside of Edmonton, the annual Alberta tennis championships got underway here at the Glenora Tennis Club on Sunday afternoon with play running true to form and nothing in the way of a major upset.

The title chase is wide open in the singles with neither of the champions, Doug Gunn and Jean Saunders of Calgary, defending their crowns.

The 10 stern city however is well-represented by Gertrude Peterson, Ernie Anderson, Bill Stark, Bill Uren, Frank Foxton and Gordon McLaws.

One of the matches drawing most interest on Sunday was the singles tilt between LAC. Norman Jones of the Australian Air Force and John Stott of Edmonton. Jones has played against Bromwich and a number of other top-flight Aussie net stars. However he has not been playing for some time and Stott was in fine form with the result that the airman was fully extended to win 4-6, 6-2 and 10-8.

A technical upset was recorded in the ladies' open singles when Mrs. K. Bannerman defeated Agnes Thorburn 6-4, 6-2. Miss Thorburn was the ladies' number one seeded player.

Play will get underway at noon today and will continue throughout the week. Courts of the Civil Service and Garneau tennis clubs will also be used today for some matches in addition to the Glenora plant.

Mioland Third As Big Pebble Takes Gold Cup

LOS ANGELES, July 21—(AP)—Big Pebble and Paperboy sank the overladen Mioland boat Saturday in the biggest turf upset of the year.

Battling it out in a stirring stretch duel, Big Pebble scored a smashing victory in the $75,000 Gold Cup handicap before a screeching mob of 41,000 fans.

Paperboy, the rightly-feared three-year-old, made a gallant challenge for the top money of this fourth running of the event, while Mioland, the odds-on favorite, ran third in a photo-finish.

It was the most exciting race in the series, and brought about the biggest surprise as Charles S. Howard's Mioland met, not one but two masters in this mile and one quarter race.

FOR FIRST TIME

Living up to his reputation for the first time, Big Pebble, with Jackie Westrope in the saddle, ran in the same style as he did in whipping the Bradley horse, Bimelich, for the Widener Cup last winter and collected a purse of $62,475 for his owner, Edward S. Moore of Sheridan, Wyo.

Paperboy owned by Harry L. Warner, and handled by one of the best lightweight jockeys in the game, little Nick Wall, boombed into contention on the back stretch, taking care of Mioland's stable mate Porter's Cap, and in the crowd set up a thunderous roar, moved into the lead half way down the stretch.

BIG PEBBLE ROLLS

Mioland charged up at him, but couldn't make the grade, and then Big Pebble stormed up like a thunderbolt. He passed Mioland and then Paperboy—and held on tight in a hard drive.

Big Pebble ran the distance in 2:02 3-5—three fifths of a second shy of the track record hung up a year ago by the mare Challedon in winning this same cup.

Mioland's only alibi, if he had any, was that he carried too much weight—120 pounds. The Pebble was next high with 119, and Paperboy was the paperweight of the race at 118.

Big Pebble paid $12.80 to win, $5.80 to place and $2.80 to show. Paperboy paid $3.40 and $2.80, and Mioland paid $2.80.

Paperboy won $15,000 second money, Mioland $7,500 for third and Wing and Win, another late arrival who had not received a call in the first stages, won $3,750 fourth money. The race in added money was worth $89,250.

The betting handle for the big race was $254,963, largest amount ever wagered on a single race at Hollywood Park.

Allan Boes Cops Manitoba Junior

WINNIPEG, July 21 — (CP) — Allan Boes, 32-year-old Winnipeg golfer, won the Manitoba amateur championship Saturday by defeating 17-year-old Bill Ezinicki of St. Boniface 8 and 6 in a scheduled 36-hole match.

It was the first provincial title for Boes, who earlier eliminated the defending champion and Canadian junior champion Howard Bennett of Winnipeg.

Maple Leafs Pitted Against Unbeaten Canadians Tuesday

TUESDAY evening the Edmonton Junior Baseball League race gets underway again at Renfrew Park with the third-place Maple Leafs playing the undefeated Canadian Athletic Club squad coached by Dick Speer.

The Leafs have won two and lost three games so far in the schedule but have shown promise of enough power to give the leading Canadians a gruelling battle.

Speer has been drilling his Canadians hard lately on some of the finer points of the game, giving them some of simpler plays that are used by major leaguers. Even though his boys have won five straight games, this former Detroit Tiger is far from satisfied with them. He wants them to play smart ball and they are showing rapid improvement.

The second Junior League game this week will be Friday evening with Henry Singer's Clothiers taking a crack at the job of stopping the Canadians. The Clothiers are in record place with four wins and two losses which should make this game mighty interesting.

Dodgers Knock Ponoka Off Top With 9th Inning Rally

GOING to bat in the last half of the ninth behind the eight-ball by 6-3, Cal Pickle's Dodgers put over a smashing four-run rally to beat Ponoka Stampeders 7-6 here at Renfrew Park on Sunday afternoon.

This dramatic victory by the Dodgers dropped the Stampeders out of the leadership of the Central Alberta baseball League for the first time this season and put the Idle Arrows at the top of the heap.

Ponoka new battery of the Hawkey brothers turned in a fine performance until the fatal ninth. Pitcher Hawkey mowed down no less than 14 batters on strike outs and held every inning except the first and ninth.

Dodgers did just about everything they could to give the Stampeders a win—unintentionally of course—by contributing no less than eight fielding errors.

This is the second time that the Hawkey battery has appeared to have a win sewn up for Ponoka only to lose out. The Stampeders' fielding was not to blame for Sunday's loss for the only error was one made by Chapman. It was just a hitting attack that couldn't be shut off in time.

Canadiens Get Dame, Bicknell From Kootenays

NELSON, B.C., July 21—(CP)—Len. Bicknell, voted the most valuable man on the Nelson Maple Leaf lineup last winter, and Bunny Dame, Trail Smoke Eater who holds the West Kootenay Hockey League's scoring record of 62 points, were signed this week-end by Coach Dick Irvin to try out with Montreal Canadiens this fall.

Irvin, who made a combined pleasure and business trip to Nelson to Trail, stated that because of the army draft taking many of the younger hockey players around 21 and 22, there was a better market than ever before for well seasoned amateurs. He said that though both Bicknell and Dame were in their upper twenties, they would fit in the scheme of things in the N.H.L.

Castonguay Set New Pop-pop Mark

QUEBEC, July 21—(CP)—French Castonguay, of Springfield, Mass. lowered his own Canadian motorcycle record here Sunday by covering a half-mile dirt track in 29.15 seconds in a race sanctioned by the American Motorcycle Association. His previous record, set here June 22, was 30.70 seconds.

About 6,000 fans saw 12 of the best riders in the eastern United States, Ontario and Quebec roar around the track in turn, but Castonguay's record-shattering performance was untouched.

Red Deer Entry Senior Hockey Gets Loop's O.K.

Exclusive to Edmonton Bulletin

RED DEER, July 21—At a meeting here on Sunday of officials of the Alberta Senior Hockey League it was decided to admit Red Deer to the loop as soon a $1,500 bond is posted with secretary of the league as evidence of the local team's ability to complete the season. No difficulty was expected in getting the bond and the prospective new entry was welcomed to the circuit.

Frank Coulson, well known hockey coach and manager, who will handle the Red Deer Buffalos the Red Deer entry outlined for the meeting what had been done here. Mr. Coulson has a strong team in view and has the enthusiastic support of the hockey backers here. It is felt that senior hockey will go over with a bang. Plans call for considerable improvements to the Red Deer arena, including enlarging the seating capacity of the building.

Three teams, Lethbridge, Turner Valley and Calgary, are certain starters in the senior league for next winter. Red Deer is seeking admission and it is possible that Drumheller may come in.

Present at the meeting were: President Cameron, Turner Valley; Secretary J. T. North, Bob Mamini and Harry Walshaw, Calgary, and Wm. Herron, Turner Valley.

Theo Dubois of Winnipeg Crowned King United States Amateur Single Rowing

MINNEAPOLIS, July 21.—(CP)—Thirty-year-old Theo Dubois, of the Winnipeg Rowing club, who Saturday succeeded Joe Burke, of Philadelphia as United States amateur singles sculling champion, will also try for the Canadian crown won a year ago by Burke, who now is a professional.

Dubois, an oarsman veteran of 16 years, the winner of both the U.S. and Canadian doubles championships in 1939 when Albert Riley, of Winnipeg, was his partner, will now go to St. Catharines, Ont., to participate in the Canadian Henley.

Prior to the National Amateur Rowing championships here Dubois expressed disappointment that he couldn't battle Burke again to wipe out the sting of finishing twice in second place in the two major North American Regattas last season.

But after his triumph Saturday before 20,000 fans Dubois said the win made him just about the happiest sculler in the world.

FORCED TO LIMIT

The 195-pound Dubois, however, was forced to call on all the power in his six-foot-four frame to pull away from Joe Angyal, of Brooklyn, in the last 50 yards of the 1¼-mile course.

The Winnipegger had too much power and reserve for the plucky Brooklyn rower and won with a length and a quarter to spare. His time was eight minutes, 35 1-5 seconds against Angyal's one eight minute 39½ seconds.

Observers said Dubois' time was fast as the competitors, contrary to regatta custom, rowed upstream so spectators would have a better chance of seeing the finish on the winding Mississippi course.

HE TIGHTENED UP

Dubois, in recalling the 1940 race, said that when he came to the finals against Burke, "I felt the muscles were tightening in my arms . . . I kept up the pace for three-quarters of a mile, but just didn't have enough left."

The Winnipeg star said he had spent $1,200 on rowing in the last three years, including travelling expenses. One shell, purchased at Fort William and used at one time by Bobby Pearce, former Olympic champion, cost $400, he said.

Parker Wins New Title For New York

NEW YORK, July 21.—(CP)—Frankie Parker, of California Sunday won the New York State Tennis championship on the clay courts at Seminole club, Forest Hills, defeating Ladislav Hecht, New York, 6-1, 6-3.

Hecht, the former Czecho-Slovak Davis Cup star, attended the final by putting out Donald McNeill, United States champion, in the quarter final, and Ted Olewine, of California in the semi-final.

Cox To Manage Philadelphia Team

PHILADELPHIA, July 21—(AP)—Danny Cox, former Toronto and Ottawa N.H.L. centre-player, was named manager and coach of the Philadelphia team in the International-American hockey league over the week-end.

He succeeds Herb Gardiner, who was in charge while the local club was a farm for the New York Rangers in the International League. The team is now owned independently by the arena corporation.

Texan Captures Publinx Crown

SPOKANE, July 21.—(CP)—Bill Welch, of Houston, Texas, an oil-field worker, won the United States public links golf championship Saturday, defeating Jack Kerns, insurance underwriter, of Denver, Colo., 6 and 5 in the 36-hole final.

Welch succeeded Robert Clark, of St. Paul, Minn., as possessor of the Standish cup.

Eskimo Quartet Lift Bulletin Canoe Trophy

Plowing down the six-mile stretch of the swollen Saskatchewan River from White Mud Creek to the 105 St. bridge, the four-man crew of the Edmonton Ski Club—Stu Birch, Stu Gillespie, Alf Walker and Jack Hamilton, won the Edmonton Bulletin trophy Sunday afternoon in the fast time of 30 minutes and three-fifths seconds.

The Voyageurs crew of Jack Basford, George Watt, Alex Stevenson and Bill Sears was a close second. Three other entries failed to complete the course.

R. C. Brown was the official in charge of the race. Prizes were provided by the Western Hardware.

Next big event on the river canoe program will be the Voyageur Club race to be held August 10 a half mile above White Mud Creek. These events will be open to members of all clubs.

Olynyks Wrest Eaton Golf Bowl From Martells

The Martell brothers lost the Eaton challenge golf trophy Sunday afternoon to another pair of brothers from the Highlands club—Alec and Pete Olynyk, when Alec holed out on the 17th green with a birdie four and then equalled Henry Martell's par on the 18th for a one-up victory.

It was tight golf all the way with birdies needed to win. The first three holes were halved in pars and Pete Olynyk took the first hole in the match with a birdie four on the fourth against pars by the others.

They halved the fifth, sixth and seventh in pars. Then Alec Olynyk and Henry Martell matched birdies on the eighth and Pete Olynyk on the ninth. The Martells needed fives while Pete Olynyk holed out in a par four to square the match.

The next two 10's was halved and then Henry Martell each scored a birdie three and Alec matched them with another birdie for another half. Pete Olynyk squared the match again on the 14th with a birdie against pars. The Martells went one up on the 15th as they both holed in birdies against pars.

Pete Olynyk came right back with another birdie to square the match on the 16th. Alec Olynyk won the 17th with a birdie against pars and then matched Henry's para on the 18th to win the match and lift the trophy.

Henry Martell was two under par—one on each nine—for a 70, while Pete Olynyk even pars of 36 and 36 for a 72. Alex Olynyk and Regna Martell did not hole out on all greens.

Sam Kerr Victor Eastern Pro Golf

TORONTO, July 21.—(CP)—Sam Kerr, of Toronto Glen Mawr, won the Miller trophy for Eastern Canada professional golfers Saturday, with a one-sided 3 and 1 decision over Lloyd Tucker, Kitchener, Ont., professional.

In semi-final matches Saturday Kerr disposed of Stan Horne, of Brantford, 4 and 3, while Tucker scored the biggest upset of the three-day tournament when he whipped defending champion Bob Gray, of Scarborough, 2 and 2.

Alberta Boes Cops Manitoba Junior

WINNIPEG, July 21 — (CP) — Allan Boes, 32-year-old Winnipeg golfer, won the Manitoba amateur championship Saturday by defeating 17-year-old Bill Ezinicki of St. Boniface 8 and 6 in a scheduled 36-hole match.

It was the first provincial title for Boes, who earlier eliminated the defending champion and Canadian junior champion Howard Bennett of Winnipeg.

Hambone Kelly Might Have Been Champ . . . With Shoes

IT has always been a matter of lingering artistic distress with me that Mr. Mucker McGrath became so confoundedly bumfuzzled over something or other that evening that he proceeded to the ball park without Mr. Hambone Kelly's personal satchel. I've always been of the impression that if Mr. Kelly had won that one, he probably would have gone on to one of the major pugilistic championships, and if that semi-miracle had ever come to pass, the world might have had another spider-legged hitter to mention in the same bracket with the freckled Bob Fitzsimmons.

The horrific Hambone could hit like the crack of doom. A portsider by nature, he was really a switch hitter. He merely seemed to turn his wrist a little toward the inside with a slight push forward, like a man shooting his cuff to look at his wrist watch, but opponents went down as if machine gun fire had suddenly cut the legs from under them.

The principal trouble was they weren't much opponents. The Bone never could be made to take any of it very seriously. An anvil chinned Gael from South Boston, the Kerry Patch of that storied bourne where the Cabots speak only to the Lowells and the Lowells speak only to God. Mr. Kelly—the first name was really Joe—was one of those rare and uninhibited children of nature who simply couldn't be bothered.

If anybody wanted to fight, sure, he'd fight, and if they wanted a ring and rounds and all, that was all right with him. His manager of record was a neighborhood Boy Scout, Mr. Mucker McGrath, now a Boston politician of some prominence, and Mucker at the time was considerable pumpkins in the pugilistic patch because he was flapping the towel on a new and likewise local Irish heavyweight, Jim Maloney.

Because of this high estate, Mucker was able to make arrangements for the Mighty Bone to meet Paul Berlenbach, then the world's light heavy weight champion, in an evening soiree at the Boston National League Baseball Park, and it was apparently all right with the Bone although it's extremely doubtful that he knew or cared exactly whom or what he was going to fight.

WHAT, NO SHOES?

MR. McGRATH, however, was very excited about it, so excited, in fact, that when time came to depart from a Back Bay hotel wherein he'd told the Hambone his career-ended, he forgot to include the grip that had Kelly's gear in it; and when the locus belli was reached, they were fresh out of lights, shorts and things. There wasn't time to send back for their return, and in this dire emergency, they managed to borrow the pelts of a welter-weight who had completed a stint on the preliminary card, but, to be guilty of a brash understatement, they fit our hero much, much too soon.

All of it was bad, but the most acute difficulty came in the matter of the dogs, or feet. The Kelly tribbles were approximately the size of kites, and these shoes were never made for that type of area.

Mr. Kelly teetered forth to war that evening like a freshly barefoot kid on a gravel path, but he hit the champion of the world a left handed bombshell flush upon the bonnie, blue whiskers that made his eyes spin like two loose veal buttons and his knees buckle like a Mohammedan kneeling to pray. Berlenbach will still tell you that the hardest punch he ever stopped in his life came "from a guy named Kelly up in Boston."

But that was practically all there was to it. Berlenbach, who had a chin of solid oak, didn't take the count, although another clip half as hard would probably have finished him. But Mr. Kelly wasn't clipping any more that night. Instead he had turned toward his corner and ordered, "Throw in de towel".

Go on. Go on. Fight him. You've got him groggy", excitedly shrilled Mucker. "Hit 'im again. Let him have that left."

"Nuts", responded Mr. Kelly. "My dogs hurt. These shoes are killin' me".

"Never mind the shoes", screamed Mucker, "you've got the guy out! Give him the left, the left . . ."

"You give it to him", called the Bone, and practically simultaneously, Berlenbach weaved back out of his corna, smacked Kelly in the puss, or face, and the Bone had little time to think about his feet for the rest of the round.

BUT HE COULD HIT!

THE affair progressed for some four stanzas, with Kelly threatening to quit and McGrath pleading with him to use mind over matter. Finally Berlenbach nailed the gentleman and he dropped to take the full toll. He was already reaching for his shoe laces before the referee finished.

If Kelly had had his own fiddle cases, he might have won that one, and if he had, he might have gone on. As it was, he lapsed back into the neighborhood trade, where he still is, incidentally, lolling around in the sun these summery days and not worrying about anything in particular.

But he could hit!

He didn't need gloves in fact, he was better without them. A fellow told me about watching him wade in one night to the assistance of a friendly cop set upon by a dozen toughs trying to rescue a prisoner. They said you'd see first one Kelly shoulder, then the other, move forward ever so slightly. Each time, a tough's face would rise about six inches from the ground, his head about six inches above the crewel level. That would be another one on the ground cold as Christmas Eve in Labrador.

I was just perusing a pseudo-scientific article upon Mr. Lou Nova's celebrated "cosmic punch", and it went on to presume to talk about "hitting". This happened to be one guy in my town—you've probably got 'em in yours—who couldn't tell you why, nor how, but he only started hitting where most of the rest of these fellows stopped.

"Champion of the world" is a glamorous misnomer. He means champion in a variety of the regulated art. Those others are the gents who could take any of 'em on a street corner. It depends upon what kind of fighting you're talking about.

WON A BALL GAME WITHOUT PITCHING A BALL! In a baseball game between Jackson, Miss., and Selma, Ala., on May 24, 1941, Harrel Toenes, of Selma, had the wierd distinction of being the winning pitcher without throwing a single ball toward the plate! Toenes was called in to pitch, Jackson having a runner on first base. Taking his position on the rubber, he delivered the ball to first and not to the plate, retiring a pinch-hitter, and without making a pitch other than to first base, he gained credit for winning the ball game.

Yanks Beat Detroit Tigers With 6 Runs in 17th Frame

By GAYLE TALBOT

NEW YORK, July 21.—St. Louis Cardinals are on their way back west today to open a long home stand against the Eastern clubs, and there is a good chance they will take complete charge of the National League race before they are again routed out of Sportsman's Park.

They left that impression behind them as they completed a smashing tour of the seaboard with a double defeat of Boston Braves yesterday 4-2 and 7-3. That made it seven victories in their last nine games.

The Cards are playing breath-taking, heil-for-leather baseball, taking all sorts of chances and running wild on the paths.

Brooklyn, by doing no better than breaking even against Pittsburgh yesterday, saw its lead sliced to a game and a half, with a long road trip ahead. The Dodgers have played only 300 ball in their last 10 games at home, and their pitching staff is showing alarming signs of falling apart.

WYATT LOSES THIRD STRAIGHT

Whit Wyatt, the team's ace, lost his third straight start when the Pirates beat him 5-1 in the second game. Fred Fitzsimmons, reliable veteran, was struck on the arm by a batted ball and forced to retire in the first till, which Curt Davis went on to win 5-1. Kirby Higbe, another of the Dodgers' "Big Three," is in hospital with a bad appendix and will not accompany the club west.

Cincinnati Reds, who haven't yet lost hope of winning their third straight flag, climbed within two percentage points of third place by thumping the Phillies 7-1 and 3-2. Paul Derringer broke a five-game losing streak in the first, in which he left 12 Phils stranded. The New York Giants won the first from Chicago, 7-5, Carl Hubbell scoring his ninth victory, but the Cubs came back to take the second, 7-4, behind Verne Olsen.

LONGEST OF SEASON

In the most spectacular game of a heavy day, the Yankees exploded for six runs in the 17th inning to win a 12-6 decision over Detroit at Briggs Stadium. Deadlocked 6-6 at the end of the nine frames, they batted four hours and five minutes before the blow-off finally came.

Included in the Yankees' winning assault on Al Benton and Johnny Gorsica were home runs by Charley Keller and Tom Henrich and doubles by Johnny Sturm, Red Rolfe and Joe DiMaggio. DiMaggio previously had clouted a home run and a pair of doubles.

The hard-earned victory increased the Yanks' lead to seven full games over Cleveland Indians, who dividend a brace with Washington. The Senators beat them 8-4 in the first behind Steve Sundra, but a rash of errors in the late innings by the Washington infield enabled the Indians to take the second, 5-1.

St. Louis Browns swept their second doubleheader in two days over Boston by diving Red Sox, 6-3 and 10-0. George McQuinn had a gay day of it at bat for the Browns, who the second 4-1 in 13 innings.

Ben Hogan Wins $5,000 Open Golf

CHICAGO, July 21 — (AP) — Ben Hogan, in a final round battle which saw him out-punch national open champion Craig Wood, captured the $5,000 Chicago open golf championship Sunday with a 72-hole total of 274 strokes, 10 under par for the Elmhurst Country Club course.

Four strokes ahead of Wood at the 54-hole point, Hogan saw his margin steadily whittled as the open titleholder turned on the heat. Then the little professional, placed in the money in his 31st straight tournament, slugged his way out of this "corner" with a blast of sub par golf on the final four holes.

Wood Sunday carded two brilliant rounds of 67-67, each four under par for a 72-hole total of 276. Hogan fired a pair of 69's.

Mrs. Saunders Champ Municipal Golf

Mrs. Ken Saunders won the women's championship of the Municipal Golf Club on Sunday when she scored a two-up victory over Mrs. Tommy Vickers.

In the Consolation final, Mrs. Albert Rocque defeated Miss Peggy Aitken three and two.

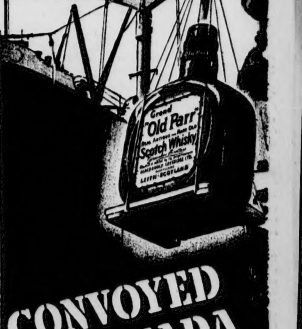

Manitoba Drownings

WINNIPEG, July 21—(CP)—Two Manitobans drowned Sunday as hundreds of residents flocked to beaches and rivers seeking relief from severe heat that sent thermometers up to 93 degrees. Irving Stuart, 20 of Winnipeg drowned in the Brokenhead river near Beausejour, Man., and William Chikeski, 47, of Silver Bay Man., drowned in the Silver Bay when he got into water beyond his depth.

Workers Killed

ROME, July 21—(AP)—An estimated 30 persons were killed and 50 injured Saturday night when a passenger train crashed into a freight between Como San Giovanni and Albate Camerlata, on the Milan-Chiasso line. The 11-car passenger train was carrying workmen to Germany.

New York Stocks

NEW YORK, July 21—(AP)—A last-minute buying rush for rails and steels today put driving force behind the stock market and favorites bounded up 1 to more than 3 points, many of the highest marks for 1941.

Advances were well distributed throughout the session in more active dealings than recently. The pace attained speed in the final 15 minutes or so and transfers for the full proceedings were around 900,000 shares compared with 420,000 last Friday.

The ability of the rail average to break through the resistance area from which it had frequently been turned back in the four successive weekly advances of the list as a whole brought strong bidding from the chartists who had been waiting for this "confirmation."

Two Boys Drown In South Alberta

CALGARY, July 21.—(CP)—A 17-year-old youth of Airdrie, 20 miles north of here, and a six-year-old Calgary boy, were drowned in separate accidents Sunday. The tragedies were the first drownings of the current heat wave in Calgary district and happened while hundreds of citizens flocked to beaches and resorts to get relief from the heat.

King Symons, 17, only son of Mr. and Mrs. George Symons of Airdrie, drowned when he stepped into a deep hole in a slough on a farm 12 miles northwest of Airdrie, while bathing with his brother-in-law, George Williams and Stanley Hanson, 11.

Garry Rempel, 6, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Rempel of Calgary, drowned when he fell about 12 feet into eight feet of water and was carried through the gates of a dam in the ditch at the outlet of Chestermere lake. Artificial respiration was applied for three hours without avail.

Coroner Dr. George R. Johnson said no inquests would be held in either case.

49th Veterans Pay Tribute To Late Comrades

and other units, paid tribute to men who fought on the muddy, slippery, marshy slopes of the Passchendaele Ridge; in the cellars of Hooge; amid the "breastworks" of the ironically-named Sanctuary Wood; men who went "up and at 'em" with fists, rifle butts and bayonets on Mount Sorrel when their Ross Rifles jammed; men who stormed Regina Trench and other points on the Somme; who swept victoriously up the hitherto impregnable slopes of Vimy Ridge; who repelled numerous counter-attacks at Hill 70; who pierced German defences far beyong their allotted distance in front of Amiens; who raced past Orange and Telegraph Hills to fight bitterly at Pelves; who went forward across the Canal du Nord, beyond Cambrai, Denain, Douai, Valenciennes and on November 11, 1918, surged through the streets of Mons just before the Armistice went into effect.

GOVERNOR TAKES SALUTE

Men who fought in all these and other actions were recalled in the commemorative service.

The weather was clear and fine, but hot. In spite of the high temperature, there was a large turnout, about 1,000 marching and 500 more attending the service.

A feature of the parade was that on the return from the legislative buildings grounds His Honor Lt. Col. J. C. Bowen, lieutenant-governor of Alberta, took the salute standing on the south side of 100 avenue, just opposite the Masonic Temple.

The parade was under command of Maj. Gen. W. A. Griesbach, C.B., C.M.G., D.S.O., V.D., K.C., inspector-general of the Canadian Army in western Canada, who was the original officer commanding the 49th and who later commanded the 1st Canadian Infantry Brigade.

Major R. C. Arthurs, M.C., former adjutant of the 49th was parade adjutant and Norman Arnold was parade sergeant-major.

UNITS JOIN PARADE

Forty-Niners paraded wearing medals, berets and arm-bands, with the last-mentioned on the right arm.

Invited to take part in the parade and service were the 2nd Battalion, Edmonton Regiment, (R)CA; the Canadian Legion, B.E.S.L.; the Red Chevron Club, Army and Navy Veterans' Association, Canadian Corps Association, Imperial Veterans' Association and Amputations Association.

With the "Fall In" sounding at 9.45 a.m. for Forty-Niners, others participating mobilized individually but all save the 2nd Battalion, Edmonton Regiment, were in position at the Market Square at 10:15 a.m. They formed up, facing south in the following order: band of the 2nd Battalion, Edmonton Regiment on the right; 49th Battalion Association in close column of companies on the left of the band; Canadian Legion on left of 49th Bn. Association; Red Chevron Club, Army and Navy Veterans' Association, Canadian Corps Association, Imperial Veterans' Association and Amputation Association.

The 2nd Battalion, Edmonton Regiment remained in column of route on 101 street with the head of the column resting on 101A avenue.

A detachment from the Camrose Training Centre also was represented.

MARTIAL MUSIC

The 2nd Battalion joined in the rear of the other organizations as the parade moved toward the legislative buildings grounds.

At 10:30 a.m. the troops moved off from the Market Square to 101A avenue, west to 101 street, south to 100 avenue, west past the Cenotaph to 107 street and south to the legislative buildings grounds.

The regimental band of the 2nd Battalion, Edmonton Regiment, under Band Sergeant Graydon Tipp, the regimental bugle band and the pipe band under Pipe Major Henry Laing provided the music.

"Colonel Bogey," "Tipperary," "Pack Up Your Troubles" and other favorite marches of the Great War were played as the boys swung through the city streets.

Special attention was paid by the spectators to the color parties, the flags waving proudly in the breeze and drawing many words of praise from the onlookers.

Route of the march was well lined with cars and spectators, many transferring their positions later to the legislative buildings grounds to attend the service.

IMPRESSIVE SIGHT

Walter McLaren, president of the Canadian Legion was at the head of the Legionnaires, complete with colors, while Lt. Col. F. S. Stewart-Dunn headed the Canadian Corps Association.

The Corps Association with the purple, red, navy blue, French blue and green berets, drew much attention, the colors blending beautifully.

The Forty-Niners in their French blue berets—the regiment was in the 3rd Division—made an impressive picture as they swung along. They, as the other veterans, stepped out briskly and with all the pride and confidence with which they marched along French roads a quarter of a century ago.

And marching behind was the 2nd Battalion, Edmonton Regiment, under command of Major G. D. K. Kinnaird, second in command and proving that the finest traditions of the "Old Brigade" are being carried on by the young battalion. The regiment formed up in two companies, under Lieut. G. M. Dunlop and Lieut. Ronald Martland.

On arrival at the legislative grounds, the parade formed up in a three-sided square with the Forty-Niners on the right, the various returned men's organizations in the centre and the 2nd Battalion Edmonton Regiment on the left flank.

DIVINE SERVICE

The divine service was under the direction of Capt. Rev. G. G. Reynolds, B.A., L.Th., chaplain of the 49th Battalion Association and rector of Holy Trinity church. Prior to entering the ministry, he fought in France with the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry and rose to command a company.

The service opened with the hymn, "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name" which was followed by the reading of the 16th Psalm. A prayer followed and the hymn "O God Our Help in Ages Past" was sung.

Capt. Reynolds then delivered his address, on the subject of "Our Goodly Heritage."

"It is a great honor to be asked to come here and address you," he said. "The 49th was known as a regiment of good soldiers and since the last war the men have been known as good citizens, even good enough to come to a church service."

He recalled that this was the first commemorative service missed by Lt. Col. L. C. Harris, V.D., original medical officer of the battalion and later officer commanding the perpetuating militia regiment. He was, said Capt. Reynolds, "400 miles away."

"GOODLY HERITAGE"

Paying a tribute to Maj. Gen. Griesbach, he said: "It is a great thing we have General Griesbach with us. His service is never-ending. He is a great citizen and a great soldier and he is proud to be with the 49th."

He pointed out that "Our lot has fallen in good ground and we will have a good heritage." God, he said, was not interested only in individuals, but was interested in groups and nations. The British Empire, he pointed out, was different from others, having no great lust for riches and no lust for power.

On the other hand, it had helped to abolish slavery and created order out of chaos on varying occasions. Self-government had been given different parts of the Empire as soon as the people were ready to govern themselves. "We have a goodly heritage indeed," he said.

He recalled that in Queen Elizabeth's time, threat of invasion was as great as it is today. He declared that "God raised up Churchill to lead England" and that "we are living in an age of miracles. Miracles are happening on every side."

COMPLIMENTS PAID

An offertory was then taken for the work of the 49th Battalion Association.

The hymn, "O Valiant Hearts," was then sung and the service was concluded with the National anthem. Color parties had marched to usual positions and deposited flags with drum units during the service. Colors were "dipped" as the National anthem was played.

The parade marched back by the same route as it went to the legislative buildings.

As he reached the point at which His Honor stood on 100 avenue, Maj. Gen. Griesbach "fell out" and joined His Honor, with whom also were Capt. Allan Gillies, his secretary and Capt. J. C. MacQuarrie, who served as the original 49th signals officer in France and later as A.D.C. to Maj. Gen. Griesbach.

Compliments were paid His Honor as the band played marching past and colors were "let fly." Colors were at the "slope" while on the march and at the "carry" marching to and from the parade grounds.

The parade also paid tribute to the memory of the First Great War dead as it passed the Cenotaph.

HOLD REUNION

Following dispersal of the parade, the Forty-Niners, their wives and families held a get-together at the Royal George hotel.

Copies of The Forty-Niner, the official magazine of the association, were distributed and many laudatory remarks were heard on the fine material contained therein and on the make-up of the magazine as a whole.

Resident of Edmonton since 1910, Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Carleton, 79, died in the city Saturday. She had come to Edmonton from Ireland, and had made her home at 11132 89 avenue. She is survived by two brothers and one sister in Ireland, and two sons, William J., and George A., and one daughter, Mrs. W. Montgomery, all of Edmonton. Private funeral services will be held at Hainstock's funeral chapel, Wednesday at 2:30 p.m., Rev. W. T. Young officiating. Interment will take place in the Mount Pleasant cemetery.

R.A.F. Daylight Raid Smashes Invasion Coast

the British planes were striking far inland, apparently without opposition from the German fighter planes they were challenging.

More and more planes joined in the flight toward France until the sky was thick with them. As succeeding waves of planes came back to the English coast, new waves swept over to the attack. There were planes of all sorts at all altitudes and in all directions.

In their night raid on the invasion coast, planes of the coastal command started over the strait at midnight. Until 5 a.m. they bombed in relays the defences which the Germans for some months now have been constructing in the Boulogne-Cape Griz Nez area. Explosions of bombs shook the Kentish coast, and it was evident that the attack was a heavy one.

It was known that the Germans had been working hard on the defences. On clear days British United Press observers, using powerful glasses, have seen the defences gradually taking shape. Long white slashes mark excavations where the Germans have hewn roads in the chalk cliffs. Near the Dover patrol War Memorial on the French side the Germans have erected a big circular concrete building and all along the cliffs other buildings are going up. It is believed in London that the Germans have built a network of roads at strategic points between Calais and Boulogne to give their troops fluidity of movement. The roads have been sunk to give armored vehicles and supply trucks good cover.

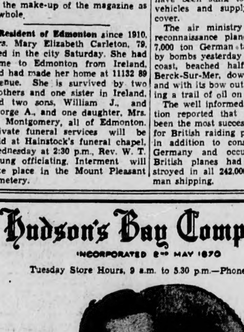

The air ministry reported that reconnaissance planes had seen a 7,000 ton German tanker, crippled by bombs yesterday off the French coast, beached half a mile from Berck-Sur-Mer, down at the stern and with its bow out of water, spilling a trail of oil on the sea.

The well informed Press Association reported that last week had been the most successful of the war for British raiding planes and that in addition to constant raids on Germany and occupied territory British planes had probably destroyed in all 242,000 tons of German shipping.

600 MEET IN CITY SUNDAY

Edmonton Ukrainians Pledge Support For War Effort

Nearly 600 Ukrainians gathered at the Imperial hall, 10021 102 avenue, Sunday night, to express their solidarity and sympathy with the people of the Soviet Union in their struggle against Hitlerism. The meeting was sponsored by the newly-formed Ukrainian Anti-Fascist committee.

Resolutions were passed unanimously endorsing a telegram to the Hon. William L. Mackenzie King, prime minister of Canada; a cablegram to Mikhail Kalinen, chairman of the presidium of the supreme soviet at Moscow; and letters to Constantine Oumansky, ambassador of the U. S. S. R. at Washington, D.C., and Prime Minister King at Ottawa.

Speakers at the meeting were William Irvine, provincial organizer for the C.C.F. in Alberta; Mrs. Roy Peterson, member of the Alberta C.C.F. executive; John Klysbancweky, well-known local Ukrainian; and A. Herd, who spoke in place of C. H. Huestis, honorary chairman of the local committee of the People's Movement. John C. Dubeta, school teacher at Beauvallon, was chairman of the meeting.

N. Kully acted as secretary.

Telegram to Prime Minister King offers "wholehearted support of your splendid war effort against Nazi "asclsm", pledges "utmost support in endorsing Prime Minister Churchill and his government's British-Soviet relations leading to an alliance and the inevitable defeat of the aggressors."

CONFIDENT OF VICTORY

Condemnation of "the predatory attack on the Soviets" is embodied in the cablegram to Chairman Mikhail Kalinen sent by the meeting of local Ukrainians. The cablegram further ended "send message of solidarity with heroic armed de-

Co-Operation Promise Sent To Mackenzie King

Getting Around with JOHN OLIVER

FRESH evidence is being adduced continually, not only of the British ability to "hand it out" and to "take it" in this gargantuan struggle, but of the freedom of the ocean lanes guaranteed by the Royal Navy as "Mistress of the Seas." Convoys are reaching the Mother Country in gradually increasing numbers and at the same time, both airforce and undersea craft of the Axis are steadily diminishing in numbers. Production of war materials is ever-increasing in Britain and at the same time factories are turning out an uninterrupted flow of industrial goods.

The Old Country is maintaining its reputation as "a nation of traders." Figures show that exports still reach tremendous proportions, and agents of buyers are taking orders for early delivery of clothing and other products and are assuring safe delivery through being "convoyed by the British navy."

The latest testimony of thoroughness on the part of the British, even in these days of stress, has been laid before this observer, as well as other city residents, through receipt of a letter from the British Broadcasting Corporation, asking for information regarding its programs and the effect on listeners here. The letter was accompanied by a questionnaire, the object of which "is to gather information to help us in planning improvements in our short-wave service. We shall be most grateful for your co-operation."

Then the questionnaire asks "Did you listen to the B.B.C. at some time every day last week? If not, on how many days did you listen? Do you listen to the B.B.C. more, less, or the same amount as you did three months ago? Which regular B.B.C. features have you heard? When did you last hear them? and how did you enjoy them?" These and other questions are asked. The whole idea impressed me as another striking instance of British ability to carry on under even the most adverse conditions. To go to the trouble of making what must be an Empire-wide canvass under the stress the B.B.C. is under at present, certainly shows a resolute determination to overcome all difficulties to achieve victory.

I encountered a friend who had just received a letter from Rev. Fr. Joseph Malone, formerly a devoted worker in St. Joseph's Roman Catholic parish, who left here as padre to No. 4 Casualty Clearing Station, with which unit he is still serving. Fr. Malone is enjoying his work with the C.C.S. and mentions having requested to be left there rather than be assigned to other duties. He tells of having met Gillis Purcell, Canadian Press officer with the Canadian Army, who was a frequent visitor to this city prior to going overseas.

Mention was also made of Clifford S. Wallace, former city newspaperman who is now serving in England with the Canadian forces. Fr. Malone met Mr. Purcell for the first time in England and on being introduced, the latter recalled having heard the former preach a sermon at St. Joseph's Cathedral during one of his visits. Fr. Malone was not sure whether his preaching had been so good or so bad that is merited remembrance, but Mr. Purcell assured him, it was a most meritorious memorable oration. He wrote of having encountered other Edmontonites, who appeared in fine health and spirits.

Sixteen Join Active Army Over Week-End

Over the week-end, 16 recruits were medically boarded at the Prince of Wales Armory for the Canadian Army (A), according to Lt.-Col. Allan H. Elliott, officer commanding No. 13A District Depot. These men will be absorbed into the 18th quota, which is now being recruited throughout the Dominion.

Alberta has been asked to contribute 730 of the total. More than 500 have been enlisted and the entire quota is expected to be filled by July 25.

During Exhibition week the army, navy and air force maintained recruiting offices at the military encampment established at the fairgrounds. Many inquiries were received and much information was given on various branches of the service.

On Saturday night, Lt.-Col. E. Brown, M.M., E.D. area commandant took the salute during the "Retreat" ceremony held at 7:30 p.m. each day of the fair last week.

He was accompanied by Lieut. Colin Glasseo, officer commanding the R.C.N.V.R. station here; Flight-Lieut. Harry E. Jones, R.C.A.F. recruiting officer, and Nursing Sister Margaret Thompson, R.N., R.C.A.M.C.

INSPECTS GUARD

In addition to taking the salute, Lt.-Col. Brown inspected the guard. He briefly addressed the gathering, thanking Lieut.-J. M. Kerr, camp commandant, for his co-operation during the week. He also thanked all officers, N.C.O.'s and men who had contributed during the week toward making the encampment and all that it stood for such a success. Thanks were extended to the band, which played for ceremonial and gave concerts all week, under the baton of Sgt. Harry Kirk.

The encampment was struck Saturday night and the convoy of several trucks and 125 men left Sunday for Calgary, to return to duty at the Infantry Training Centre, Currie Barracks.

Brigade Reports Two Small Fires

Two small fires in the city over the weekend were reported by the Edmonton fire department Monday.

A building used as a cook-house at Victoria Park was burned at 1:30 a.m. Sunday and a small refreshment booth slightly damaged when fire of unknown origin broke out. No. 2 firehall responded and used two lines of shemicals to extinguish the blaze. Constables Nelson and Frazer of the city police force investigated.

Believed to have started when a mop used for dusting ignited and burned a hole in the floor, a small fire at the Kitchen block on 101 street Saturday was extinguished almost immediately by firemen from halls 1 and 2. The alarm was sent in at 1 p.m. Constables Robertson and Gardiner of the city police force investigated.

The Inquiring Reporter

THE QUESTION

Reports that Germany is massing troops on the Turkish Border for an invasion of that country prompted the Inquiring Reporter to seek opinions on whether Hitler would order the invasion or not.

THE ANSWERS

LEN LORDON, salesman: Another broken promise is nothing to Hitler. He will go into Turkey if he thinks it necessary for the welfare of Germany, but he will be like the boy and the puts in the hornet-packed jar. He will have to let them all go to get his hand out.

BENNY LEONARD, bookkeeper: I should not be the least bit surprised to see Hitler invade Turkey. He will invade almost any country rather than turn his hand to the invasion of Britain. He can invade all the countries but he must lick the British Empire to be able to hold them. And he can't do that.

GORDON HULBURD, salesman: Hitler seems to be getting all he wants in Russia at present, but if a flanking movement through Turkey on the Russian defences would assist him he will not hesitate to violate the non-aggression and friendship pact recently signed with the Turkish government. The only treaty Hitley will honor is the treaty that gives him everything he wants.

Crime Absent In Fair Week Police Report

The most "crimeless" Exhibition week since 1912 was reported Monday by Staff-Insp. Matt Blackwood of the city police, who was in charge of law and order at the grounds last week. One case of purse-snatching and a number of lost children Monday were reported.

Including 10 special constables, 18 members of the force were on duty each day under the direction of Insp. Blackwood.

Distributors To Meet

First large retail distributors' convention ever held in the north will take place at Spirit River on Wednesday, it was announced last week by A. C. MacKay, secretary of the Alberta branch of the Retail Merchants' Association. More than 125 retailers from the Peace River district will meet with the board executive.

AROUND THE TOWN

City Police Chief A. G. Shute left the city over the week-end for a two-week vacation at White Rock, B.C. Staff-Inspector Matt Blackwood is assuming the chief's duties for the period.

The holder of ticket No. 16577 was the winner of the $5 war savings certificate at the Northern Alberta Dairy Pool booth at the fair Saturday.

J. C. Lessard, of the national parks branch, Ottawa, is a city visitor and is a guest at the Macdonald hotel. He has been inspecting highways in the Jasper, Banff, Yoho and Kootenay national parks.

Judging of entries in the annual garden and home competitions of the Edmonton Horticultural and Vacant Lots Association will take place this week, it was announced by the association Monday. Results are expected to be available by the end of this week. Closing date for all entries in the annual Edmonton Flower Show is August 14. Woman Robbed By Purse - Snatcher: Hit By Assailant Beaten about the face as a "heavily-set man wearing a grey jacket and black trousers" attempted to throw her to the ground Saturday night, Mrs. Nick Melnyk, 12504 Fort Road, told police that a purse containing $12, some silver, letters and her registration card was snatched by her assailant.

Mrs. Melnyk told police she was returning to her home from the exhibition grounds at about 10.30 p.m. Saturday and had taken a short cut through a bush north of 120 avenue on the railway tracks when the man passed her, then returned and tried to throw her to the ground, struck her and grabbed her purse.

Police later searched the district, and investigation is being continued.

Typing Contest Eliminations Will Be Held In City Tonight

Competition to determine Edmonton's representation on the Canadian team in the International Typewriting Marathon will open at Aberhart Collegiate on Monday evening (tonight) at 8 p.m.

A large number of entries have been received, but all wishing to compete in the Edmonton elimination contest may make their entry in the competition at the college right up to starting time this evening.

The winner of the Edmonton contest goes to the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto, to take part in the two-week competition, when the typewriter keys are tapped steadily throughout the day and night, the twelve members of each team working in relays.

The eliminations are sponsored by The Edmonton Bulletin and Alberta College and will be directed by Miss Alice Frederking, typing teacher at the college.

The elimination test will be of 45 minutes duration in which both speed and accuracy are scored. The first night's test will be a warm-up to enable the contestants to "find themselves" and to overcome the nervousness which may be felt in competition.

Contestants may use their own typewriters or those supplied by the college. The latter machines will be new models thoroughly checked and tested prior to the test.

He's Harvesting

First farmer of the Edmonton district to report harvesting operations is Frank Wilde, whose farm is eight miles west of the city. He harvested a 20-acre crop of barley, averaging 50 bushels to the acre, this week.

Auto Thieves Caught After Police Chase

A chase that started at Cooking Lake and ended at Kitscoty, Alta., Sunday afternoon kept members of the R.C.M.P. highway patrol plenty busy.

W. Wooll, Saskatoon, Sask., reported the loss of his car shortly after 2 p.m. Sunday. A visitor at the Cooking Lake hotel told police that he saw three juveniles drive his car from the hotel. R.C.M.P. first sighted the vehicle at Cooking Lake and fired warning shots. A Vermilion police cordon also fired and the trio was again seen passing through Lloydminster.

The boys were finally apprehended at Kitscoty in the evening and have been brought back to the city. The car has been returned to its owner.

Woman Struck By Car As Husband Looks On

Harry Masters received slight injuries about the hands when his bicycle was struck by a car at 11.40 p.m. Saturday when he was cycling between 95 and 96 streets on Jasper avenue. He was thrown against the car and the bicycle was damaged.

Mrs. Forsman had just crossed the intersection at 101 street and Jasper avenue at 2:45 p.m. Saturday when she was struck by a car driven by J. T. Lett, 10040 107 street, police said. She was carrying a child in her arms at the time, and was about six feet from the curb when struck. She was not knocked down.

Minor Injuries Are Suffered By City Residents

Five persons received minor injuries in traffic accidents in Edmonton over the weekend, according to reports made by city police Monday.

The injured: Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Sorenson, 11705 83 St.; George Morgan, 11537 84 St.; Harry Masters, 7477 112 Ave., Mrs. C. Form, 10040 107 St.

Mr. and Mrs. Sorenson and Mr. Morgan were injured when their automobile, driven by Mr. Sorenson was struck by a car operated by John Nider, 10006 105A avenue, at the intersection of 105A avenue and 101 street at 6:10 p.m. Saturday, police said.

CARS WRECKED

Mr. Sorenson told police he was driving north on 101 street, and when about to cross the intersection at 105A avenue was struck by Nider's car which had cut the intersection going east. With no time to stop to avoid a collision, Sorenson accelerated his car and struck the Nider car on the left front fender. The two automobiles scraped together for some distance, tearing off the left rear fender of Sorenson's car. When the cars separated, Sorenson lost control and his automobile struck a steel lamppost, seriously damaging the car.

Nider stated he did not see the other car until the impact. He was arrested on a charge of driving while under the influence of liquor. Crane service was needed to remove the wrecked cars from the road.

Airforce Takes Grounds As City Fair Concludes

Edmonton has enjoyed its last summer fair for the war's duration. Saturday evening the curtain was rung down on an institution which has provided entertainment and education to the people of Edmonton and district for 63 consecutive years.

At midnight control of the grounds was turned over to the Royal Canadian Air Force under an agreement entered into between the City, the Edmonton Exhibition Association and the Department of National Defence. The grounds will now be used as a manning depot for the Royal Canadian Air Force.

Although attendance at the 1941 summer fair was 10,150 below that of last year P. W. Abbott K.C., managing director of the association, stated Saturday evening that the fair would result in a substantial net profit which would compare favorably with last year's financial result when a profit in excess of $10,000 was made.

PAID ATTENDANCE

Actual paid attendance for the 1941 show was 134,399 compared with 144,873 last year. The extreme heat which prevailed throughout the fair week was given as a reason for the drop in attendance.

During the 1941 fair $208,285 went through the pari-mutuel machines as against $322,451 last year, a decrease of $14,166. Approximately $15,000 was collected by the federal government under the new two per cent betting tax, while a further $15,000 was put aside under the provincial betting tax.

Saturday large crowds witnessed the most thrilling races of the entire week, with a dead heat featuring the Victory Handicap. Knack, a grey gelding owned by M. C. Lambert, Drumheller, and ridden by Freddie Soloman won the Valiant handicap from Baby Joe after a thrilling race over the one mile and five eighth distance. This race was extremely popular with the large crowd of race fans, and Knack and his jockey were given a tremendous ovation as they came back to the winner's circle.

MIDWAY POPULAR

On the All-Canadian midway crowds thronged to the merchandising booths, the side shows and the thrilling rides, and stayed on the grounds until the curfew of midnight had arrived. Then the workers of the show started to pull down the "big tops" and get them stowed in the huge specially-built railway cars which form the Conklin moving equipment. Early Sunday morning the train left for Saskatoon over the Canadian National.

Commenting on the All-Canadian midway Mr. Abbott said there had been no complaints on the operation of the midway, the concessions or the rides. The show was fully up to expectations and exceeded considerably the gross revenue of any previous midway. The crews were excellent and the rides the most thrilling ever to visit the Edmonton summer fair.

Kiddies' Land" on the midway was very popular, said Mr. Abbott, and the innovation of making provision for taking care of children in this play-land while parents enjoyed other features of the show was greatly appreciated.

"Naturally the entire directorate feel sad at the prospect that this might be the last operation for some time on the exhibition grounds," stated Mr. Abbott. "We are very proud of the progress and improvement made in past years, and it is with a tinge of regret, while proud to be called on to assist in Canada's war effort through the relinquishing of the grounds, that directors view the closing of the association's activities at the exhibition grounds for the war's duration."

Sunday's office staff of the association was busy getting out prize cheques and attending to the numerous details consequent on the summer fair. Following the completion of the summer fair business the staff of the association will start work on the fall sheep and swine show scheduled for October. Venue of this show has not been determined yet.

Although the heat was still excessive on Saturday a light breze from the north brought relief to thousands attending the fair, and few cases of fainting were reported. As has been general throughout the week, Saturday was a very low ebb, and police Saturday had an extremely easy time. The fair fighters at the ground did not have a single call to action.

Co-Operation Is Seen In City On Gasoline Sales

Edmontonians were taking the new gasoline sales regulations as a matter of course, and were co-operating to the limit in assisting in Canada's war effort, garage and service station owners stated Monday. New regulations provide for the closing of service stations from 7 p.m. to 7 a.m. on week days and from 7 p.m. Saturday to 7 a.m. Monday, eliminating sales on Sunday.

There was no rush to get gasoline Monday, other than the usual business and it was noticeable that many users of cars had decided to walk to business and thus conserve fuel supplies, one service station owner stated.

It is also anticipated that any difficulty will arise in the city through the government's order as there has been an entire absence of grumbling, customers taking the regulations as a matter of course.

A. E. Rosborough On Teacher Board

Arthur Edward Rosborough, Edmonton teacher, had been appointed to be a member of the board of administrators under the Teachers' Retirement Fund Act. His appointment is from June 30, 1941, to June 30, 1945.

The Teachers' Retirement Fund Act was passed at the 1939 session of the legislature. It provides for establishment of a retirement fund, for payment of superannuation to teachers employed in teaching in school districts or school divisions which receive grants from the province and to teachers acting as full time employees of the Alberta Teachers' Association.

The board consists of four members, two appointed by the government and two by the teachers' organization.

Decision For Daylight Time Expected Here

Whether daylight saving time will be established in Edmonton and throughout the province will likely be discussed at Monday evening's meeting of city council, and it is possible that a resolution asking the provincial government to advance the clock one hour will be passed by the aldermen.

Several weeks ago council unanimously endorsed the principle of adopting daylight saving time, and a request was made to the federal government to institute it through order-in-council. The Dominion authorities suggested the matter was one for the municipality to deal with. Opinion expressed by City Solicitor T. E. Garside, K.C., was that the city council did not have the legislative power to institute daylight saving time.

Military authorities in Edmonton and district have asked for its establishment to assist in training of reserve army troops.

TAXPAYERS' MOVE

Also to come before the city council will be a resolution from the Edmonton Tax Payers' Protective Association seeking elimination of capital expenditures on city projects during the war and curtailment of current expenditures on maintenance.

Requests from members of No. 4 Initial Flying Training School at the Normal school and the university that the university barber shops in the Garneau district be allowed to remain open until 8 p.m. for the convenience of airmen will be discussed also.

Many other routine matters are listed for disposal.

Debunker

In his fascinating collection of stories published under the title, "Nature Is Stranger Than Fiction" (Lippincott, Toronto), John Beaty makes the startling statement that "our largest oak and hickory forests were planted by squirrels." In former times, there were many more squirrels than today, and they buried many thousands of nuts and acorns in the ground. Only a part of these nuts was ever dug up and eaten, and the remainder grew into trees. The present declining number of squirrels probably will keep these friendly animals from ever being forest planters again.

Daughter of Ponoka Mayor Is Married

PONOKA, July 21—The emerald green gardens of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Larson in Ponoka, were the setting for a pretty wedding recently, when Marion, only daughter of His Worship Mayor and Mrs. C. E. Emman of Wetaskiwin became the bride of Edward L. Larson, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Larsen of Ponoka.

Against a backdrop of flowers and ferns, the ceremony was performed by Rev. E. Davidge. Wedding music was supplied by Miss Marjorie Robinson, A.T.C.M., of Edmonton.

The bride was a graceful figure in her floor-length gown of turquoise sheer taffeta, and a flowing veil of chapel length, caught to her head with gladioli buds. She carried a bouquet of coral gladioli.

Attending the bride as bridesmaid was Miss Anna Nelson, cousin of the bridegroom. She was gowned in pale pink organza and carried a colonial nosegay of pastel sweet peas. Supporting the bridegroom was Mr. James Montgomery of Wetaskiwin.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held in the Larsen home, with twenty-five guests present. The table was centred with a three-tiered wedding cake and with a bowl of dainty pink and white sweet peas. A toast to the bride was proposed by Rev. Davidge.

Summer Flowers Form Setting For Marriage

TALL stately white gladioli, willowy fern and blue delphinium formed a delicate floral setting in Christ church at the late afternoon hour of five o'clock on Saturday, when Winnifred Jessie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Roper of Edmonton became the bride of Harold Melvin Whittles, son of Mr. and the late Mrs. J. A. Whittles of Willkie, Sask. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Canon G. P. Gower.

The bride entered the church on the arm of her father, looking most charming in a floor length gown of frothy embroidered net over taffeta. This was fashioned with dainty sweetheart neckline and full bouffant skirt. A softly veil of white bridal illusion was caught to her head with a coronet of orange blossoms and cascaded in soft folds to her fingertips. Completing her ensemble she carried a bouquet of sweetheart roses and sweetpeas.

BRIDESMAID

Miss Dorothy Roper, a cousin of the bride, was a pretty bridesmaid in her gown of filmy blossom pink chiffon, fashioned with full skirt and fitted bodice. A Juliet cap of fresh sweetpeas in pastel tones and a bouquet of pink carnations and sweetpeas completed her ensemble.

Paris Women Flaunt Their Patriotism

Editor's Note: Flaunting their undying patriotism in France, the women of Paris have many ways of letting their German over-lords realize that their country does not and never can truly belong to Germany. The following letter, received by a Canadian woman from occupied Paris, gives a vivid picture of the dauntless spirit of the former centre of fashion and culture.

Letter from Paris: Parisian women wear hats composed almost entirely of artificial flowers—the national flowers of France—cornflowers, dahlias and poppies. Their German overlords regard, with helpless anger, this flaunting of France's tricolor, on every pretty head—in pert defiance. These fashions lend a picturesque note to our beloved Paris and, although stomachs are tightly belted, one tries never to complain. Courage is the "ley mot."

Provisioning in France becomes increasingly difficult. The coupons do not permit the purchase of much, and sometimes nothing at all, if the shop is emptied before one's turn in the line-up comes.

Young girls of good families, studying for advanced legal, medical or kindred careers, are obliged to take odd jobs, give lessons, etc., to help the family purse, which finds itself strained to collapsing point, because of elevated prices.

As France, up to now, has lived on her rapidly dwindling reserves, grave lack is felt. After food-rationing came that of shoes, then clothing coupons.

Before the latter were issued there existed already an edict which commanded clothiers to sell only to those of their regular clients who came armed with a permit to buy, issued by the "Mairee" (the city hall) and this only in very particular cases. It is the end of shopping over the counter.

Shortage of grain has necessitated the killing of all possible cattle—the young animals as fast as they arrive—the raising of chickens and even rabbits is almost impossible. Vegetables sell at exorbitant prices and are beyond the reach of the poorer classes. Interminable queues of valiant housewives stand for 4 or 5 hours at a stretch, to obtain a negligible scrap of fish or meat—or nothing.

Miss R. Rogers, Mr. T. Lefebvre, Are Married

CHARMING in its simplicity was the wedding service performed in the Bissell Memorial chapel at the evening hour of eight o'clock on Saturday, when Rev. Stephens united in marriage Ruth Rogers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Rogers of Edmonton and Mr. Theodore Lefebvre, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. Lefebvre, also of this city.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was smart in her afternoon frock of sapphire beige fashioned with long waistline and self-embroidered front. The skirt was slightly flared, the sleeves elbow length and the neckline softly rounded. A small flower hat in two tones of blue, and a bouquet of sweetheart roses and sweet pea completed her outfit.

Mrs. R. Bell was a charming matron of honor, wearing for the occasion a summery jacket frock of cool white accented with bright red trimming. Her bouquet and accessories were of matching white. She carried a bouquet of pastel toned sweet peas.

Following the ceremony, a reception to about 40 guests was held at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Rogers receiving and wearing a delph blue crepe afternoon dress fashioned on redingote lines. Her accessories were in blue and she wore a wide-brimmed blue straw hat. Pinned to her shoulder was a corsage of sweetpeas.

Mrs. Lefebvre, mother of the bridegroom, chose for her son's wedding a modish frock of black crepe and black accessories. She was relieved by a corsage of sweetpeas pinned to the shoulder.

BRIDE'S TABLE

The bride's table was laid with a dainty cloth of ecru lace and centred with a wedding cake. A fragrant note of color was loaned to the rooms with bouquets of summer blossoms.

After the reception, the young couple left on a wedding trip to Calgary and Banff, the bride changing to a jacket frock in soft aloha blue. On return, they will make their home in Edmonton.

Wedding Vows Are Pledged In Crossfield

The Baptist Church in Crossfield was the scene of a pretty wedding recently when Esther Bertha, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Wall of Didsbury became the bride of Mr. Bernard R. Blough, second son of Mrs. Myrtle A. Blough of Crossfield. Rev. D. G. Milligan officiated.

For her wedding the bride chose a floor-length frock of white sheer. With it she wore a picture hat in white and carried an arm bouquet of sweet peas and pink carnations.

She was attended by Miss Opal Blough, sister of the bridegroom who wore a gown of delphinium blue with matching hat. At her shoulder she pinned a corsage of sweet peas.

Mr. C. E. Wall, brother of the bride, supported the bridegroom as best man.

During the signing of the register Mr. G. B. Wall, brother of the bride, sang "Love Never Faileth."

Following the wedding Mr. and Mrs. Wall entertained at a buffet supper at their home. For the occasion Mrs. Wall chose a redingote frock in navy blue sheer with matching accessories. At her shoulder she wore a corsage of red roses. Mrs. Blough wore a flowered blue sheer with contrasting accessories. She had a corsage of yellow roses. The bride's table was set with sweet peas and centered with the three-tiered wedding cake. Miss Hattie Law poured tea.

After a short honeymoon the young couple will make their home in Crossfield.

Presiding at the tea table were Mrs. W. F. Chisholm and Mrs. J. J. Duggan. Assisting were Mrs. Gordon Campbell, Mrs. Richard Leger, Mrs. Harold Archibald of Banff, Miss Ann Gillis, Miss Mary Speakman and Miss Helen Speakman.

Peden, Ottawa, in Christ Church Cathedral, where the bride's parents also were married. Dean Cecil Swanson officiated.

Tall white cathedral tapers flanked the altar, enhanced by clusters of snapdragons, carnations and sweetpeas while standards of gladioli, dalsies and lillies banked the chancel rail.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a frock of Belgian hand-threaded lace. She carried a bouquet of white daisies and complemented her attire with a single strand of pearls.

Mrs. Mortimer Duffus, matron of honor, Miss Jane Kirkland and Miss Barbara Burns, cousins of the bride, bridesmaids, were floor length companion frocks of white eyelet pique. Mr. Allan Macdonald was best man.

A reception was held later at the home of the bride.

The couple will make a motor trip to Vancouver Island, before returning here when they will reside temporarily.

Many Holiday At Lovely Gull Lake

While city-dwellers suffered from the heat last week, vacationists at the lake area revelled in the cool and quiet afforded by any of Alberta's lovely lake-side resorts. At Gull Lake many Edmontonians enjoyed all the pleasures that a stay at the lake entails. Among the Edmonton visitors are Hon. Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Fallow and Mrs. W. R. "Wop" May and their children. Dropping in on Mr. and Mrs. Stuart McQueen, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh H. Hamilton.

Teacher Of Wetaskiwin Marries Here

Focussing the attention of many district friends was the charming wedding solemnized in Robertson United church, Edmonton, one afternoon this past week, when Edythe Venecella (Val) Corbett, of Wetaskiwin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Corbett, of Kinsella, Alberta, became the bride of Olaf Melvin Ness of Edmonton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Severt Ness of Camrose. Rev. W. Gilbert officiated at the ceremony.

The bride has been a member of the public school teaching staff at Wetaskiwin for a number of years, and the interest of a host of friends in teaching and circles there and in the district is centred in the marriage.

Attired in an afternoon frock of Juniper blue crepe, the bride was a graceful figure at her marriage. The frock was fashioned on princess lines and featured full flaring skirt, and bracelet length sleeves. A smart wide hat in white straw with blue and dusty pink trim and white accessories completed her ensemble. She wore a corsage of pink roses and gardenias. She was given in marriage by her father.

Following the ceremony a reception to immediate families of the bride and bridegroom was arranged at the Corona hotel. For her daughter's marriage, Mrs. Corbett wore an American blue redingote frock, large felt hat to match and corsage of pink carnations and given pea blossoms.

Mrs. Ness, mother of the bridegroom, chose a navy blue crepe frock with large white and navy blue straw hat for the occasion Her flowers were deep pink carnations and sweet peas.

TO LIVE HERE

Later the bride and bridegroom left for a wedding trip to Banff and Jasper. After the first of August, they will be home to their friends at 10230 113 street, Edmonton.

Dorothy Dix Says:

A woman told me the other day that she had her picture taken every year, just as regularly as she went to her dentist and doctor for an annual check-up, so that she could keep a line on how she looked to other people. "For," said she, "the camera tells you the truth about yourself that your family and friends are too kind to tell you and that your enemies daren't tell you.

Dorothy Dix

"You may think of yourself as young and gay and having retained your girlish figure, and that you won't have to worry about your age for the next 20 years, but when your photograph comes home, showing a large, stout, middle-aged-looking lady, with stooped shoulders and her face as round and mushy-looking as a cream cheese, you do something about it."

Righto, I thought, and then I thought what a pity it is that we can't have ourselves photographed mentally and morally every now and then so we could see how we appear to those about us. How many faults and foibles it would enable us to correct! How much easier it would make us to live with!

Suppose we could get a photograph of our dispositions. Of course, we know we are high-spirited and sensitive and have a nervous temperament. Or perhaps we are irritable or silent or morose or of a pessimistic nature. But on the whole we see ourselves as attractive and loveable, with a few blemishes that are overshadowed by our superabundant virtues. Wouldn't we get the jar of our lives if we got a photograph of our dispositions and saw them as they looked to other people?

And suppose we could get a photograph of our habits. We see ourselves as pleasant and agreeable companions whose society every one must enjoy. Of course, we have our own little individual ways and peculiarities. Wouldn't it shock us if we got a photograph of our characters and saw that we were nothing but monsters of selfishness, with no regard for anybody else but ourselves, and that we had developed the manners of a hog?

Wet'-Fitting Slip For Women

Summer's the time to be young and gay—and here's the frock to make you look that way. Pattern 4197 by Anne Adams. Make it up in a fresh, crisp cotton; speed your stitches with the wonderful Sewing Instructor. The square neck with its "picture frame" yoke is very becoming, and that trim waistband gives you a slim and willowy midriff. There's one smart panel down the front skirt for nice lines. No side placket is needed, for a slide fastening or a buttoning goes far down the back. Choose between a cool, open lap-over sleeve and a straight and simple style. For extra color you might let the yoke, and perhaps the waistband too, be of bright contrast. Tatting or ric-rac is optional trim.

Pattern 4797 is available in misses' sizes 12, 14, 16, 18 and 20. Size 16 takes 3 yards 39 inch fabric.

Send twenty cents in coins for this Anne Adams pattern. Write plainly size, name, address and style number.

Your Figure Madame!

By IDA JEAN KAIN

I must be getting along. I used to think I had to be doing something every minute of a vacation or I wasn't getting my money's worth. It wouldn't have occurred to me not to get up early to go for a swim before breakfast. And now I sometimes start off with a breakfast in bed.

I have come to realize that a vacation should provide—among other things—a good rest. We live twice as fast as we used to and it is hard for us to let down. A vacation is our one chance in the year to completely break the pace.

Certainly, desk workers need exercise. But when your muscles have been accustomed to sitting on the job five or six days out of every week, they are unequal to a sudden spurt of strenuous activity. At most resorts you have access to tennis, badminton, boating, riding, swimming, or maybe mountain climbing, all guaranteed to do you a world of good. But you had better be a lazy bones and ease into your athletics. There's no compulsion to prove how strong you are. Or how not to set break records. You are supposed to enjoy yourself.

Unless you have been exposed to the sun regularly, don't try to get your coat of vacation tan in the first few days. The health authorities warn you against going around in the hot sun with your head bare. After you have done your stint of exercise, rest in the shade. Don't sit in the sun to catch your breath—and, above all, don't catnap in it.

If your skin turns red or blisters, but won't tan, sun is not for you. You should try to keep out of the direct rays. The same advice applies to the thin-skinned blondes because they burn easily.

It may be that you are one of those people whose idea of a vacation is to average about 400 miles a day in your car. By all means see as much as you can, but don't drive yourself too hard. Except for the change of scenery, there is very little difference between sitting at your desk and sitting behind the wheel of your car. The stoppovers that allow for mild activity will do a great deal more to put you into condition.

Whatever you do, have some fun. Consider yourself a little. Don't feel obligated to make a fourth at bridge when you'd so much rather be reading a good book. Say to yourself, "No, for two weeks out of the year, I can do just as I please!"

Your Baby And Mine

By MYRTLE MEYER ELDRED

Toothing is so much less serious a crisis in a baby's life in these days of fine feeding, that little is said about it.

One takes it pretty much for granted that at the proper time—for a particular baby—teeth will find their way into his mouth and little help is expected or demanded of the mother. This is as it should be.

Teeth and bones grow without aid if the food materials for their growth are provided. The materials for such purposes are supplied by the widely known diet consisting of milk, fruits, vegetables, whole grain cereals, and breads and some form of Vitamin D.

This last, provided by the sun in summer, and cod liver oil or concentrated or super D oils in winter, provides the specific means by which the body extracts all the nutritive materials for bones and teeth.

Mrs. M. L. is somewhat puzzled because her 3-year-old-child has only 20 teeth and her 5-year-old twins have 24. Do all three have the proper number?" she writes. "And when will they cut the rest of their teeth? Will you devote a column to this soon?"

Your 3-year-old has his first set of 20 teeth and your twins are slightly ahead of the procession with their 6-year molars.

These are the first teeth of the permanent set and should be treasured for that reason. If they decay they should be filled and not pulled because they provide the keystone in the arch of the larger set of permanent teeth, 32 in number.

Beginning at about the sixth year, children's first teeth begin to drop out in about the same order in which they are cut. Even if there is nothing obviously wrong with the teeth, the children should be taken to a dentist every six months. This allows for the child to get acquainted with the dentist through tooth-cleaning and any simple fillings, if these be necessary.

The feeling that the first teeth need not be repaired, because they will be lost anyway, is a mistake. The second teeth should have a space prepared for them by the first teeth, so that loss of the first teeth before their time is to be deplored. And, of course, rotting teeth in the mouth need not only repair but correction of the diet that is causing them.

Our leaflet, "Teeth", indicates the ages at which one may expect both first and second teeth. You may obtain it without cost by sending your request to Myrtle Meyer Eldred in care of this newspaper. Your request should be accompanied by a three-cent-stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Year-Round Slip Cover Revives Old Chair

Simple To Fit Any Chair Or Sofa

What a blessing slip covers are for worn, shabby chairs! Like new upholstery. And you can so easily and inexpensively make attractive year-round styles.

Smart now are covers of colorful cotton crash like the one we've shown—a rich beige with a green and rust all-over motif. Seams are bound in beige and the flounce is smartly pleated.

The secret of making a well-fitting cover is that you smooth the fabric over the old upholstery, pin where seams will be and cut, leaving plenty inch seam allowance. Work a section at a time—first inside back and seat, then arms, back. The flounce you add last to finished cover.

To fit a barrel chair like the one pictured, smooth fabric down inside back and cut at bottom. Pierce as the diagram shows or, if fabric is wide, make two long darts in place of seams. Then sew up seams and attach a 4-inch bias band along the bottom to tuck in.

In our 32-page booklet you find directions for making slip covers for all types of chairs and sofas, including barrel and channelback styles. Explains every step; estimating material, cutting, fitting, finishing. Suggests fabrics, colors, trimmings.

Diet "Yardstick" Is Translated for Housewife

By MRS. GAYNOR MADDOX

No matter what part of the country you live in, nor what the season, you can plan your family meals to fit into the new national "yardstick of a good diet," given by the Food and Nutrition Committee of the National Research Council. Nutritionists and home economists have been working this scientific list into family menu terms.

These two menus for a day, planned by the Bureau of Home Economics, measure up to the new "nutrition yardstick." Anyone with an appetite can understand.

MENU I

BREAKFAST: Rolled oats and milk, applesauce, scrambled eggs, toast and butter, milk (for children), coffee (for adults).

LUNCH OR SUPPER: Potato soup with onions, peanut butter and lettuce sandwich on whole-wheat bread, fresh fruit, milk for all.

DINNER: Beef pot roast, stewed tomatoes, green beans, bread and butter (whole grain or enriched bread), berry shortcake, milk (children), coffee or tea (adults).

MENU II

BREAKFAST: Whole-wheat cereal with milk, tomato or orange juice (young children), French toast, milk (children), coffee (adults).

LUNCH OR SUPPER: Baked beans and salt pork, brown bread and butter, cabbage slaw, milk for all.

DINNER: Braised liver, creamed potatoes, spinach, bread and butter, prune whip, milk (children), coffee or tea (adults).

Before you adjust the "nutrition yardstick" to your own family preferences and to your own local market, you should memorize this very important list of foods required every day by a healthy person:

Milk: Three-fourths to 1 quart a day for a growing child; 1 quart for expectant or nursing mothers; 1 pint for everyone else.

Tomatoes, Oranges, Grapefruit, Green Cabbage, Raw Vegetable Greens: One or more servings for everyone.

Leafy, Green, or Yellow Vegetables: One or more servings.

Potatoes, Other Vegetables and Fruits: Two servings or more a day.

Eggs: One a day, or at least 3 or 4 a week.

Lean Meat, Poultry or Fish: One or more servings a day.

Cereals: At least 2 servings of whole grain products or enriched bread.

Fats and Sweets: Some butter or Vitamin A rich fat every day, and enough more fats and sweets to satisfy the appetite.

Tomorrow's Menu

BREAKFAST: Orange juice, boiled eggs, whole-wheat toast, coffee, milk.

LUNCHEON: Cream of spinach soup, toasted cheese sandwiches, fruit bowl, tea, milk.

DINNER: Lamb kidney stew, brown rice, buttered beets, lettuce and radish salad, peach pie, coffee, milk.

Minute Make-Ups

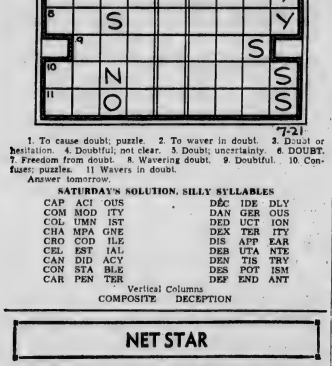

Don't trust to soap and water for skin cleansing when you travel. Take several jars of your favorite cream—you can drop them among your clothes. Take along several bottles of skin freshener. Buy a large size, then fill four or six small screw top bottles with the liquid. When at camp or at an inaccessible summer resort, if you break a bottle it's only a little one. Big bottles and jars are a liability. You can give yourself a quick make-up on a well cleansed and freshened skin.

Answer to Previous Puzzle

McCoy Health Service

One hundred years ago, bread was considered to be the staff of life, and many old writings emphasize that fact. As time went on, the loaf of bread became less and less the staff of life, due to the many refining processes the flour was subjected to, which refining gradually denuded the loaf to more or less inert starchy "filler" which was lacking in the vitamin and mineral content necessary to sustain life. Recent discoveries have shown that refined flour used in making the ordinary white bread was deficient in these essential vitamins and minerals, and public health measures have been adopted to correct this appalling condition. Modern bakeries are now making white bread which looks nice and tastes nice and has all of the properties of the coarse and unsightly black bread which was used by our ancestors. This is accomplished by adding Vitamin B, iron and calcium to the flour, which elements are lost when the grain is milled according to modern requirements. This addition has been considered sufficiently important that the governments of several countries have made this improvement in bread making mandatory. The public in recent years have cut down on bread consumption, and the bakers of America are glad to spread the good news of this restoration so that perhaps the loaf of bread will again resume its proper place in the dietary of the people. The vital B vitamins are present in the germ of wheat kernel and because this wheat germ is milled out of white flour, the eaters have consequently suffered a vitamin B deficiency. Vitamin B is known as the nerve vitamin and is the second best known vitamin, next to vitamin D. The lack of this important vitamin B results in the most widespread nutritional ailments including fatigue, fear, moodiness and nervousness. It is reported that German parachutists carry a supply of this vitamin in tablet form, when they are in action. It was thought that these tablets found on the German troops, were drugs or narcotics. It is interesting to note that all of this news about the value of the wholewheat bread and its value as the staff of life, was advocated and preached for years by Dr. McCoy when his colleagues said it was just a lot of fantastical claptrap. Time changes things. Readers who are interested in securing further information, are invited to send for Dr. McCoy's interesting article entitled "Bread, The Staff Of Life". Just address your request to the McCoy Health Service enclosing a large self addressed envelope and five cents in stamps, and your copy will be promptly mailed.

McKenney On Bridge

Not all the pleasure of bridge is in playing it. Hands are interesting in themselves. The real bridge lover gets a thrill from solving a colorful, once-in-a-lifetime freak actually dealt.

Here is a hand sent me by Sam Katz of Newark which hangs up some sort of record.

East did not guess the killing lead of a diamond, but opened his partner's suit. Katz, sitting North, ruffed and then cashed the king and ace of clubs. The king of spades was laid down. East did not cover, and the king held, dummy discarding a diamond.

Then the queen of spades was led. East covered and dummy trumped. Another trump lead put North in again to cash the rest of the spades, on which dummy shed all the diamonds, so that South in the end ruffed out North's deuce of diamonds.

One often sees two or three losers discarded, preparatory to ruffing losers in the same suit held by the partner's hand. But have you ever before seen seven losers discarded from dummy, so that dummy can ruff one loser in declarer's hand? I never have, and I think that this situation is just as rare as a hand of thirteen spades.

Pope Overworked, Will Take Rest Month Of August

VATICAN CITY, July 21.—(AP)—An unofficial report said Sunday that nervous exhaustion caused by two years of heavy work without a real rest has induced Pope Pius XII to decide to spend most of the hot days of August in a house in the Vatican gardens.

This source said there was nothing alarming in the condition of the Pontiff, who is 65, but that since he refused to leave the Vatican during the war his associates had prevailed upon him to reduce his audiences and spend most of each afternoon in the fresh air of the gardens.

It was announced Saturday that the Pope would occupy the residence of his garden director, Augusto Iaccio, and has moved into one of the Vatican palaces.

Mrs. Austin, wife of Hartlepool, County Durham, England, she leaves her husband, John Petrie Austin, a daughter, one son and a sister, all of Calgary.

Duff Cooper Is Named Far East Co-Ordinator; New Information Head

By HAROLD FAIR

LONDON, July 21.—(CP)—Prime Minister Churchill revised his cabinet today for the third time since May 2, naming Alfred Duff Cooper special war co-ordinator in the Far East and putting Brendan Bracken, his parliamentary private secretary, in Mr. Cooper's place as minister of information.

Mr. Bracken, a huge man with red hair, is the fourth minister of information to hold office since this war started. He inherits a post which often has been called the "graveyard of ministerial reputations," because its occupants have been the targets of such sharp criticism.

The exact nature of Mr. Cooper's new assignment was not disclosed, but it was understood his duties would be similar to those of Capt. Cliver Lyttleton, government co-ordinator in the middle east. Mr. Cooper—a 51-year-old Conservative who resigned as Prime Minister Chamberlain's first lord of the admiralty because he disapproved of his appointment—is believed headed for Singapore, potential trouble spot if Japan should attempt an oft-predicted southward thrust.

MEMBER OF GOVERNMENT

Unlike Capt. Lyttleton who is a special minister of state, Mr. Cooper will not be a member of the inner circle of the war cabinet but a member of the government, however, by virtue of his appointment as chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster in place of Lord Hankey.

Other government changes saw Lord Hankey appointed paymaster general and 38-year-old R. A. Butler elevated from parliamentary undersecretary for foreign affairs to president of the board of education.

Mr. Butler replaces Herwald Ramsbotham who was appointed chairman of the Unemployment Assistance Board to succeed Lord Rushcliffe, now retired; Mr. Ramsbotham was made a baron which gives him the title "Soper."

Initial press comment on the changes, which also included appointments in the service departments, was characterized chiefly by criticism of Mr. Churchill's failure to heed oft-repeated demands for appointment of a minister of production.

Some well-informed sources, however said Mr. Churchill was considering such an appointment and might announce creation of the ministry at the forthcoming parliamentary debate on production.

Most observers believed the choice in that event would lie between Lord Beaverbrook, new minister of supply, and Ernest Bevin, minister of labor.

ASSIGNMENT JUSTIFIED

In general, the press reaction was that Mr. Cooper's assignment to the Orient was justified.

The Daily Mail pointed out that if there are any serious developments in that region the duties may become even more important than those in the middle east. The same paper, however, called for "drastic departmental reorganizations" of the government, with appointment of ministers of production and civil defence and "a new start based on scientific planning."

The Daily Herald said Mr. Churchill's mere appointment of production minister was "deeply disappointing."

Political circles regarded the changes merely as a tightening of governmental machinery and reflection of Mr. Churchill's desire to get younger men into responsible positions. Mr. Bracken, for instance, before the war was chairman of the Financial News and editor of The Banker, is 40.

Mayor Raynault Of Montreal To Visit Edmonton

VANCOUVER, July 21—(CP)—Mayor Adhemar Raynault, of Montreal, left Vancouver Sunday after telling Mayor J. W. Cornett of Vancouver, he was going to urge Montrealers to "follow my example. Our Quota is greater and not travelling enough. They should see Canada first."

"I have been through Europe and the United States but this is the first time I have been west," Mayor Raynault said. He was astonished at the size of Vancouver.

The mayor is going to Banff and Lake Louise and from there to Edmonton, from where he will fly east.

New Jap Cabinet Holds Conference

TOKYO, July 21.—(AP)—Prince Fumimaro Konoye and his newly-organized cabinet conferred at the palace today with the army and navy high command on co-ordination between the armed services and the government.

The army and navy have taken an active part in the government reorganization, and Domei, Japanese news agency said the purpose of the 90-minute conference was "to establish fuller liaison and to attain unity between the government and the high command of the National services."

According to Domei, Konoye will outline Japanese diplomatic aims at a conference with Japanese newspapermen tomorrow and inform them then that policy decided on July 2 will not be changed. What this policy is has not been divulged.

More than 250,000 Canadians are serving in the active armed forces abroad and at home.

Ministers May Join King On London Trip

OTTAWA, July 21—(CP)—Two key ministers who have not yet had an opportunity to study the war at close quarters may visit England with Prime Minister Mackenzie King in the near future, it was unofficially reported here Sunday.

They are Navy Minister Macdonald and War Services Minister Thorson, both veterans of the first Great War. Most of their colleagues in the war committee of the cabinet have already visited the United Kingdom since the present conflict started.

There has been no formal announcement as to when Mr. King proposes to visit England and it is not known definitely that he will go.

But he has clearly stated that he will go when he may do so usefully, and it is a matter of record that Prime Minister Winston Churchill hopes to hold a conference of dominion prime ministers in London next month.

If the Prime Minister goes to London he will travel by whatever method of transportation the responsible authorities recommend. If he goes by air it will be his first flight.

Mr. King has had a full week of cabinet meetings and meetings with his colleagues on the war committee of the cabinet, but he has not made any public announcements or statements of policy since his return a week ago from a tour to the Pacific Coast.

Bennett Goes To Supply Ministry

LONDON, July 21—(CP) Cable—Viscount Bennett, wartime aircraft prime minister, is moving to the ministry of supply where he expects to help Lord Beaverbrook, the minister, in developing Britain's tank production.

The 72-year-old Canadian, now a resident of Britain, who is waiting in the lobby of the House of Lords was associated with Lord Beaverbrook in the ministry of aircraft production and the two men were associates in their early days in New Brunswick and at Calgary.

Lord Bennett has been at his desk daily since Lord Beaverbrook was transferred from the ministry of aircraft production and expects to be there a little longer until his work has been cleaned up.

He would not say definitely what his next duties will be, commenting simply "I am ready to do whatever they want me to do."

Italian Tax

ROME, July 21—(AP)—The Italian government imposed a special tax ranging from 10 to 50 per cent Saturday on excess profits from the sale of industrial securities, ostensibly as a measure against inflation.

Night And Day, R.A.F. Bombers Blast Key German Cities . . . Canada's First Optical Glass Factory Opened

Continuing their day and night lashings at the Nazi-held French coast and German industrial centers, R.A.F. bombers raided towns shown by large white dots during last few days. German planes, busy in the east with raids on Russia, stabbed only once at Britain, with raid on Southampton.

The latest government-owned war production plant, Research Enterprises Ltd., was officially opened by Hon. C. D. Howe at Leaside, Ont. The new plant will be engaged in manufacturing optical glass. Col. W. Eric Phillips, president of the company, is pictured standing with Mr. Howe, left, behind a 158-pound sample from the first melt. Three fair workers at the new plant pose, right, with some of the glass they helped to make.

"Go 'Way, Women"

Shunning the girls as though they were a plague, soldiers of the 35th Division from Fort Robinson, Ark., pass through the streets of Memphis, Tenn., discovering the penalty for whistling and "yoo-hooing" at women. Returning to camp after Tennessee war games, the soldiers spied several shorts-clad female golfers, set up a chorus of applause that Lt. Gen. Lear, playing nearby, considered very unsoldierly. When he remonstrated, they booed. Result: they were ordered to retrace the 150 miles between camp and Memphis after their hot journey and take a 20-mile hike.

Celebrate Completion Of One Year Of Active Service

While their comrades of an R.C.A.F. fighter squadron celebrated completion of one year of active service in England with an anniversary dinner, these pilots of the "readiness flight" had to remain posted, their Hurricane fighters ready for an instant takeoff if the alarm should be sounded. With the aid of the overseas unit of the CBC, however, they were able to both hear and take part in the festivities. The four pilots are, from left to right, Flying Officer Charles Cantrill, Ottawa; Flying Officer Brad Walker, London, Ont.; Pilot Officer F. W. Kelly, Toronto, and Flight Lieutenant R. E. Morrow, Vancouver. On the extreme right is Flying Officer Stephen Appleby, Ottawa, the squadron intelligence officer, and holding the microphone is Jackie Peach, Vancouver, of the CBC overseas unit.

The Man I Want

By Rob Eden

KATHLEEN O'CONNOR, 17, is drum major for the American Legion band in a small California town where her father, MATTHEW, has started her training in the entertainment field, a career he has planned for his beautiful daughter ever since her mother's death. Though a druggist of moderate means, Matt has lavished luxury upon Kathleen. She is gay despite his refusal to let her go out with one boy more than a few times. Upon being graduated from high school, Kathleen dreams of a happy summer with the younger set, including DEAN, a special boy friend. Her father, however, announces he has sold his store and is taking her to Santa Francisco to study voice. She is heartbroken. Dean, too, is remorseful. But the O'Connors leave for San Francisco.

"Because it would spoil my hands," Kathleen quoted ruefully. "Just the same we shan't be able to afford a housekeeper in San Francisco. Daddy says he will do all the

Kathleen cried, "You see, Daddy! Aunt Nora agrees with me. Why not let me go to business school? I'm sure I could get a job as a stenographer."

Nora looked surprised. "Do you mean that this isn't your idea, Kathleen? That you haven't talked your father into it?"

heavy cleaning and we can take a lot of our meals out but I'll learn all I can, Dean, I promise.

KISSES HER HANDS

He seized her hand and pressed it against his lips.

"Do you think there's any chance of his letting us be engaged. It would make me feel a lot better about the whole thing."

"Not one," she answered honestly. "Besides I don't know that I am ready yet for that. Two years is a long time and both of us might meet someone else."

"That's because you're not sure, then," he accused.

"You are first on my list. The only one I'd consider marrying at the moment but after all, Dean we are both young. It's only fair that neither of us should make any promises at this point."

He recognized the truth of this even while objecting to it. But it was hard to see her slipping away from him before he had a chance to prove his devotion.

If only he could have kept her just as she was at this moment, the boy thought wistfully. But he knew in his heart that their romance was ending almost before it had started.

The knowledge embittered those last precious hours, making him morose and moody. Instead of endearing himself to Kathleen, giving her a happy memory to take away with her, Dean tried her patience to the breaking point. He was too sensitive, she admitted and much too possessive.

The Kandy Kitchen, with its innocent bantering from table to table; the machines where you dropped a nickel and danced to the blatant, sentimental music. The motion picture theater, the church with its sweet bells which always reminded her of her mother, the cemetery on the hill where the breeze ruffled the long grass in ripples and a meadow lark sang a perpetual memorial. Their house roomy and comfortable and shabby; the garden with its riotous succession of flowers.

Dean's eyes clung to her until the last moment. Her own full of tears. Her whispered reminder, "It isn't so far, Dean. You must come to see us."

"Write to me," he urged. "Just as soon as you know your address."

She had nodded and pressed his hand, but her heart was aching as much as she dared let her emotions show. Then the car had started and Matt was saying triumphantly, "At last. We're on our way."

CHAPTER THREE

Aunt Nora lived in an apartment on Nob Hill boasting a doorman but with only one bedroom as for him. And his daughter went to a small hotel. Although the weather had been uncomfortably warm in the town they had left, San Francisco was cold.

The hotel where Matthew had stayed before on occasional business trips reflected the dreariness of the world outside.

Matthew, however, seemed undismayed. He came through the door connecting the two rooms, rubbing his hands with satisfaction.

"I just called Nora at the store. She hadn't time to say anything except that she would meet us here directly after work. That won't be long as it is already after five. You'd better get cleaned up, honey! You ought to change your dress, too. Aunt Nora hasn't seen you for a long time. She's going to be surprised."

Kathleen turned to say listlessly, "Do you think she's going to like our being here, Daddy?"

"I don't see why not. After all she's my own sister"

"But Aunt Nora's life is so different from ours. We probably won't fit into it."

"We won't try," he said sensibly. "All I want from her is some advice. We aren't in any position to go around in Nora's set even if she wanted us. We're going to be too busy."

It didn't sound very inviting to a girl who was still young enough to want her own friends and a good time. But there was no use reproaching herself, Kathleen reminded herself, obeying his instructions.

She put on the gray wool suit Aunt Nora had selected for her with the gray straw hat Kathleen had bought to go with it. Daddy liked it but she felt that she looked colorless and cold. Perhaps it was her mood.

SMARTLY DRESSED

Nora O'Connor, smartly dressed in black, exquisitely groomed from the waves of her softly graying hair to her rosy tipped clever fingers greeted her niece affectionately.

"Kathleen, my dear! Let me look at you."

She turned the girl about slowly, staring at the gray suit with a critical eye.

"Fits you beautifully, darling! But it should be at least an inch and a half shorter to be really right, you know. Of course the hat is all wrong. You should have a colored one. Red felt with a whippy veil would be the best thing."

"But this is spring," the girl protested.

"San Franciscans wear felt the year 'round," her aunt informed her. "You must come into the store some day next week and we'll see what we can find for you." She turned to her brother with amused disapproval. "Well, Matt, you've certainly done it this time. What do you mean by selling your store?"

ASSURANCE FADES

Although some of his assurance had faded beneath the brighter light of her superior efficiency and sophistication, Matthew raised his plans adding, "We're not asking anything of you, Sis, except a little advice. I'm going to start looking for something to do as soon as we are settled but first we must find a place to live."

Nora sighed and snapped open a cigaret case.

"What do you want to do, Matt?"

"I haven't thought much about it I might manage a small drug store," he said vaguely. "There's no rush about it. I got a pretty good price for the store."

"It won't last long here," his sister said practically. "And voice lessons are expensive. Just how much of a voice has she?"

"Not as strong as her mother's but very sweet and true," Matt said proudly. "I don't expect her to be a concert singer. With her looks and personality she should be able to get in the movies or on the radio."

"I'm very sorry you didn't see fit to discuss this with me before you sold the store," Nora said. "I certainly have advised you against it"

Kathleen cried, "You see, Daddy! Aunt Nora agrees with me. Why not let me go to business school? I'm sure I could get a job as a stenographer."

Nora looked surprised.

"Do you mean that this isn't your idea, Kathleen? That you haven't talked your father into it?"

OWN DECISION

"On the contrary," Matt said with dignity. "I have made my own decision. Kathleen is not old enough to know what is best for her."

"I'm not so sure about that," his sister said, putting out her cigaret. "But as I said before, there's no use talking about it The thing to do now is to have some dinner; then tomorrow I'll send you to a friend of mine who can give you a list of apartments. It isn't going to be easy to find one with two bedrooms at a price you can afford."

Her prediction proved so true that after a couple of days' fruitless search Matthew rented one with only one bedroom and a wall bed for himself. The kitchen was dark and needed painting.

Kathleen bought brightly flowered chintz which she lined and fastened to a metal rod. In the mornings with the sun streaming through upon the familiar furniture it was almost homelike but in the afternoons when the steam heat was off it seemed to reflect her own mode of loneliness and depression.

PERFECT

Matt said it was perfect. He liked to sit at the window and watch the street cars clanging by. His attitude at this point touched his daughter as much as it exasperated her. He was so determined to see only the advantages. So encouraging and applauding of every effort she made to adjust herself. And she did try. She enjoyed her daily walk to the market where she was permitted to select her own fruit ant vegetables from the scrubbed, shining piles.

Matthew hoped they could eat most of their meals out, but when he discovered that the rent they must pay would be twice what they could get for the house at home he decided it might be wise for Kathleen to do the cooking.

"This is the life," he said, lighting his pipe and settling down to the evening paper.

Kathleen, lonely for her friends, homesick for the house and garden and Kandy Kitchen, did not agree with him. But maybe it would be better after she had begun her lessons. The teacher Aunt Nora suggested had already been interviewed.

He had not displayed any undue enthusiasm about her voice but he had consented to teach her. At least it would be some place to go, something to do, Kathleen told herself. She would have to practice several hours a day and Daddy did not want her to give up her accordion.

A letter from Dean had made her cry in the privacy of her own room. It was so sweet and discouraged. He missed her so terribly, he said. He couldn't bear to drive past her house since she had gone.

Kathleen understood now what he meant. Ten days in the city living under completely new conditions had already changed her. She was learning not to expect people to speak to her, not to smile or pay any attention to anyone on the street.

Then one day, when her father was looking for a job managing a small drug store, the door bell rang and Kathleen answering, heard two heavily bearded men asking for "Miss Kathleen O'Connor."

Italians Augment Forces Stationed On Greek Islands

ANKARA, Turkey, July 21—(AP)—British sources said heavy reinforcements had been landed for Italian garrisons of Samos, Hkios and Mytilene, three Greek islands commanding Turkish coastal shipping routes and the Aegean approach to the Dardanelles.

Italians replaced German troops in the occupation of these islands before the start of the Russian-German war. British submarine activity in the Aegean and the Axis fear of possible British fleet action were said to have caused the sending of reinforcements.

City Archer Is Spearing Fish While Training

Member of an archery club in Edmonton before he joined the R.C.A.F., AC. Bob Copeman, 10909 71 avenue, is proving himself a "Dead-Eye Dick" with a bow and arrow, and using his skill with a fine art in shooting carp in an Ontario creek, according to reports received in the city.

Apart from his work of taking a special course at the R.C.A.F. technical training school in St. Thomas, Ont., his favorite recreation while off duty is practicing archery and he has fashioned a set of arrows with barbed points for shooting carp in Kettle Creek, somewhere near Fulton's Bridge.

He attaches a line to the arrow and the line is threaded to a reel fastened to his bow. Previous attempts to catch carp in this manner haven't been so successful, mainly for the reason that the barbless arrow won't hold anything it hits. He hopes to have better luck with the barbed ones.

Ukrainians To Co-operate In Effort Of War

fenders. Confident that as in 1918 the murderous gang of foreign invaders will be smashed and driven out."

Letter to the Soviet ambassador at Washington enlarges upon the ideas expressed in the cablegram to Kalinen, adding that "we feel certain we express the sincerest feelings and thoughts of over 400,000 Ukrainians in Canada, as well as three of other national groups whose native lands have been conquered and enslaved by the murderous Nazi clique."

FIGHT COMMON ENEMY

Request that the Dominion government seriously consider three recommendations, was embodied in the resolution "of solidarity with the British, Soviet, and Canadian peoples in their struggle against Hitlerism and Fascism" sent by letter to Prime Minister King. The recommendations requested consideration for the release of all anti-Nazi Ukrainian leaders; the withdrawal of the order-in-council declaring the anti-Fascist organizations illegal, and the return of their confiscated property; and the curbing of the activities of the many pro-Hitler and pro-Fascist Ukrainian groups in Canada "whose identity is without doubt well known to your government."

Keynote of speeches made during the meeting was that Russia and Britain stand together to fight a common enemy, and with their alliance will go on to an inevitable victory. Stress was also laid on the value of a victory morale, based on the "V" campaign now underway in Britain and enemy-occupied countries.

William Irvine read two resolutions passed by the recently-concluded C.C.F. provincial convention to the meeting, to show the C.C.F. stand on matters which were of concern to the Ukrainian group. One dealt with conscription, and the other with civil liberties, property and press of anti-Nazi organizations.

UKRAINIANS PLEDGED

Mrs. Peterson pointed out that the issue in this war "is whether or not we as a people shall have the right and opportunity to build a new social order." To insure that "right and opportunity" Mrs. Peterson said that "it calls for an all out total warfare from us all for the destruction of totalitarianism."

Speaking in Ukrainian, Mr. Klybanowsky reiterated the main points in the English speeches made in the gathering. He analyzed the various Russian developments leading up to the German invasion, and stressed that eventual victory would result from the Russian-British alliance. Mr. Klybanowsky also said that Ukrainians here "are pledged to give the fullest and utmost support to Canada's war effort and the defeat of Hitler."

Mr. Herd stated that the People's Movement was in accord with support for all progressive anti-Fascist groups. He intimated that work was already being done to synchronize progressive parties to wage a "people's war."

MASS MEETING PLANNED

Chairman John Dubeta said that the meeting was the first in a series to co-ordinate and consolidate the efforts of similar groups" so that the maximum results may be obtained by such organizations in the way of support for Canada's war effort. A monster mass meeting, at which all groups of such a nature will be invited, is planned for the near future.

Concert At Gibbons

Clients Put In Jeopardy Tobacco Case

Submission that their clients had been placed in jeopardy in a pre-Xmas trial on the charges now before the court was made by Lionel J. Forsyth, K.C., and S. Bruce Smith, K.C., when addressing the jury in the trial of 38 manufacturers, wholesalers and jobbers on alleged "tobacco combine" charges.

It was submitted by both counsel that the accused had previously been tried on these charges under the appropriate sections of the criminal code, and that counsel for the court had decided, when faced with a court ruling that evidence it was proposed to submit was not relevant, to discontinue the prosecution.

Having started the prosecution under the criminal code provisions and having failed, it was not open to the attorney-general of the province to lay charges under the Combines Investigation Act, counsel submitted. They quoted from Section 28 of the Act to support this contention.

SHOULD BE DISMISSED

It was submitted that the same documents used in the criminal code trial was being used in the present, which was expressly barred by Section 28. Counsel contended that the attorney-general of Alberta, having made his choice to proceed under the criminal code could not now proceed under the Combines Investigation Act and that the present charges should be dismissed.

Mr. Smith submitted also that the crown to succeed must show that the trade practices of the accused were detrimental to the public, and asserted that there was no evidence before the court to support any claim of injury to the public.

Mr. Smith submitted there was no evidence of price fixing between tobacco jobbers and manufacturers. He said it was legal and has been legal in the province of Alberta for manufacturers and wholesalers to fix prices, and if at any time these prices were too high there was nothing to stop the authorities from stepping in and regulating them. There was no evidence of any such intervention, he added.

IS UNPROFITABLE

Mr. Smith submitted that evidence before the court showed it was unprofitable to market cigarettes at 12 for 10 cents, and that it would be unreasonable to suppose that manufacturers should be compelled to do so. There was no legal obligation on a manufacturer to produce at a loss to pass on a benefit to the public, he added.

He pointed out that the marketing of 12 cigarettes for 10 cents was introduced for a limited period only as an advertising proposition.

The hearing is proceeding.

True Belief In God Essential Part Of Prayer

True belief in the power of God is an essential part of prayer, Rev. Alex. Stewart stated Sunday morning, when he was the guest preacher at St. Andrew's Presbyterian church.

"Christ spoke of the power and the dignity of prayer as a preparation for active faith," he said, "and if prayer is coupled with true faith, then prayer will be answered."

Rev. Mr. Stewart declared that the thing sought must be definitely clear in the mind of the person praying, and that the belief that the prayer will be read must also be clear.

Faith can so be developed, he said, that things seemingly impossible can be accomplished as "mountains were removed."

Rev. V. M. Gilbert of Macleod, Alta., was the guest preacher at Robertson church on Sunday morning when a joint service of Robertson and Wesley United church was held. Joint summer services are also held in Metropolitan church by the congregations of Knox and Metropolitan United church. The preacher was Rev. E. G. Turnbull, who spoke on "The Divine Pioneer" during the morning, and "Songs in the Night" during the evening service.

Rev. Thomas E. Crane of Nokomis, Sask., conducted services at Edmonton Pentecostal Tabernacle, during Sunday. He will take all services during the absence of Pastor T. Johnstone.

AT ROBERTSON

Speaking at Roberston United church, Rev. Mr. Gilbert chose the theme that the principles of Jesus' teachings "are applicable to every situation in individual lives and human relationships.

"His teachings," he said, "are applicable to the needs within this community, the needs of the continents and the needs in homes, schools, factories, and everywhere. Neither Hitler's New Order, nor Stalin's Communism, nor even Christianity can make a perfect society out of imperfect individuals," he said, "but with God's teachings we can find our way out of the war to a better world."
